Carter Says Hubert a Loser

DETROIT — Jimmy Carter said Saturday if the Democratic party turned again to Sen. Hubert Humphrey as it did in 1968, it would only be inviting another defeat in November.

Carter, opening his campaign for the May 18 Michigan primary before 500 cheering supporters in a Detroit union hall, said a deadlocked Democratic convention this year would be a "political miracle" and predicted a "quick decision" at the party assembly in New York in July.

. . . Naturally, Hubert Disagrees

INDIANAPOLIS — Hubert H. Humphrey said Saturday "I will win" if he is the Democratic nominee for President this year.

"I am not a candidate, by that I mean I am not seeking the nomination of the Presidency," Humphrey told reporters.

Udall Says He's Only 'Choice'

WEST HAVEN, Conn. — Morris Udall campaigned in Connecticut Saturday, telling liberal voters he is their only alternative to a conservative president and picking up a prominent progressive group's support.

"I'm the only thing standing between a choice for the American people between Gerald Ford, Scoop Jackson and Jimmy Carter," he said.

Ford Predicts Texas Win

EL PASO, Tex. — To the shouts of "Viva" and "Ole" in this U.S-Mexican border town, President Ford shed his underdog role Saturday and predicted victory over Ronald Reagan in Texas' May 1 primary.

Ford, without mentioning the former California governor by name, campaigned across West Texas with a warning to Reagan that "hot words or rash threats" could inflame world tension into a nuclear holocaust.

Reagan Still Says We're Weak

As usual in his press conferences, he accused the administration of "dealing from weakness, not strength" in its foreign policy.

Deadly Chinese Rioting

HONG KONG — Supporters of China's disgraced ex-vice premier killed one person in "counterrevolutionary" rioting last week, Peking radio reported Sunday.

The official Chinese radio said the disorders took place in Chengchow, capital of Central China's Honan Province.

Beame Wants Overtime Slashed

NEW YORK — Mayor Abraham D. Beame has ordered city agency heads to sharply restrict the amount of overtime paid to city employes, it was announced Saturday.

In an executive order dated April 2, Beame ordered that cash payments for overtime for an employe not exceed five per cent of the worker's base salary during the previous year, unless special authorization is given.

Is That What Happened to Flipper?

Red Star, the Soviet Army daily, said the "education" of the sea animals took place in San Diego, Calif., at the Marine Life Sciences Department of the Navys Center for Underwater Research.

"Dolphins with knives attached to their flippers are taught there to fight with underwater divers," the newspaper said.

Our Man in Warsaw

WARSAW — Col. Jerzy Pawlowski, the Polish Olympic gold medalist convicted of spying for the West, passed military secrets to a NATO country for 10 years, the armed forces newspaper Zolnierz Wolnosci said Saturday.

It was the first official comment on the national sports hero-turned-spy since his sentencing to 25 years imprisonment by a military court Thursday. The army colonel's plea of guilty to espionage charges saved him from a death sentence, the newspaper said.

We Get Tough With Trash

PLATTEKILL — The battle of the Plattekill dump now is being waged on five separate fronts, with the town fathers winning a couple of Friday court skirmishes to halt the flow from across the river.

Among legal actions that took place Friday were:

★ A temporary restraining order was issued by State Supreme Court Justice John W. Sweeny in Goshen forbidding Joseph Fiorello and Dutchess Sanitation Enterprise Inc. from dumping at the Plattekill landfill.

★ Judge Morris Lasker of the U. S. District Court in Manhattan turned down a request by Dutchess Sanitation for a temporary restraining order that would have prohibited the town from enforcing its ordinance against outside dumping.

★ Two drivers employed by Fiorello were arraigned in Plattekill Justice Court for violating the public health law and the town ordinance, and their cases were adjourned.

★ A town injunction in the form of a show cause order was prepared and papers served on Fiorello, asking him to explain why his dumping should not be restrained.

★ Details of the April 27 permit revocation proceedings against Dutchess Sanitation, initiated by the Ulster County Health Department, were released.

Thus, attorneys and public officials apparently will be active in preserving the sanctity of the Plattekill landfill on the town, county, state and federal levels. Several persons involved with the matter expressed similar opinions — that regionalization of landfill operations is probably the only long-term solution to problems such as this.

In the meantime, up to 250 tons a day of Dutchess County refuse is barred from the Plattekill site off Route 44-55. Where it is going has not been made clear, but it has been reported that attempts are being made to reopen the landfill site near the Dutchess County Airport that had been ordered closed by the Federal Aviation Administration because of the purported danger of flying birds, attracted by garbage, to aircraft.

The federal court action required some quick reaction by the Ulster County District Attorney's office, according to Asst. DA Michael Kavanagh, who told the Freeman that his office was notified at 1 p.m., Friday to appear at 7th District Court in New York City at 4 p.m.

Kavanagh and DA Francis Vogt sped down the Thruway to make their plea before Lasker, and were successful as the judge denied Fiorello's request for the temporary restraining order. Further arguments have been scheduled for April 19. Vogt has said that all cases will be taken over by the Town of Plattekill and its newly appointed attorney Michael Forrester of Newburgh, as the matter is considered to be a civil one.

Plattekill Town Justice Wayne Smith arraigned Robert Johnson and Ralph Jones, two truck drivers for Dutchess Sanitation, on the town and county charges Friday night (as he had Fiorello and another drive Wednesday) and scheduled all four to reappear in town justice court April 28. All have been released in their own recognizance.

Town Councilwoman Lee Rognon told the Freeman Saturday that papers had been served on Fiorello, prepared by Forrester, in the form of a show cause order why he should not be restrained from dumping refuse in the town. "This is a separate action," she said. Further details of this aspect of the case were not immediately available.

And of the April 27 health department hearing at the office of Health Commissioner Dr. Bartholomew Dutto to "suspend or revoke" permit No. 56 issued to Hertel Enterprises-Division of Dutchess Sanitation, and permit No. 89 issued to Dutchess Sanitation, the charges are as follows:

★ Terms and conditions of the permits were violated April 1, 2, 5, 6, and 7 in that "it transported and disposed of refuse in the County of Ulster which . . . originated outside the county . . ."

★ That the permittee ". . . failed to comply with Section 6B of an ordinance of the Town of Plattekill regulating disposal . . . by depositing on property in the town . . . garbage, rubbish and waste materials which originated outside the bounds of the Town of Plattekill."

★ That Dutchess Sanitation broke the county sanitary code "in the creation of a nuisance and the loss of discharge of such material in a public place . . . (the highway) and thereby failed to handle, cover or treat such material in such a manner that it could not escape. . ."

★ That the permittee brought in trash "on trucks for which no fee had been paid . . . and which were not listed on the application for permit nor inspection nor approved by the Ulster County Health Department. . ."

Schick Is Starting Run As a GOP Dark Horse

By Lynn Mulvaney

KINGSTON — Kingston lawyer John J. Schick seems to be emerging as a serious challenge for the Republican nomination for the Assembly.

The GOP has been looking for a strong opponent to face incumbent Democratic Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, D-101st Dist., and many Republicans including committeemen feel Schick may just be that man.

No decision was reached, however, at a meeting of the Ulster County GOP Executive Committee this week but the Republicans did agree to throw their whole-hearted support behind incumbent Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-25th Dist., as well as Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman, R-26th Dist., and the party's choice to unseat incumbent Democrat Rep. Matthew McHugh, D-27th Dist., the Rev. William H. Harter of Margaretville.

Schick, who reportedly is quite willing to make the run for the Assembly, still faces a field of GOP candidates, either interested in or mentioned for the post.

Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago, R-Dist. 8, was still noncommital last week and Assistant District Attorney Robert Francello is still interested on the condition that he gets the whole-hearted support of the party. Legislator Melvin Mones, R-City, has been mentioned frequently as a possible candidate as has Legislator William R. West, R-Dist. 2 who has some backing from the Conservative wing of the party.

The Conservative support of any of the candidates will no doubt play a significant part in the selection. Schick, who was a Democrat for a number of years and later returned to the Republican Party, is a former state committeeman and has sought the posts of district attorney and county judge.

Although he has received support at various times from all four major political parties, he has enjoyed a good deal of Conservative backing and endorsement.

Born in Connelly, he has been a life resident of the Kingston area and received his B.A. degree from Sienna College, his bachelor of laws from Albany Law School in 1952 and his juris doctor in 1968. A veteran of World War II Schick has served in various civic and governmental posts including assistant district attorney, special city judge and as a member of the Ulster County Board of Health.

He was admitted to the New York State Bar in 1952, United State Supreme Court in 1961 and the State of Florida Bar in 1972.

His Hat in (School) Ring

KINGSTON—"The key issue in this year's school board election is the continuance of quality education at an affordable cost," said Len Cane in announcing his candidacy for a seat on Kingston City Schools Consolidated Board of Education.

Two positions are open for five-year terms effective July 1. Election day is Tuesday, May 4, from noon to 9 p.m.

Cane, a Kingston resident, said that a partnership effort is needed to maintain the high quality of education throughout the district; partnership according to Cane, between the students, faculty, taxpayer, and the members of the board. "Quality education is not a sometimes thing," he said. "It takes a full-time effort from all concerned, working together for the common good."

The executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce said his background of work with and on board of directors would prove invaluable on the school board. Some of those boards include: library board of trustees, advisory council of Ulster County Community College, BOCES business advisory council, Lions Club board of directors, United Way, the state and national boards of the Jaycees and advisory boards of both Benedictine and Kingston hospitals.

Cane is currently listed in Marquis' Who's Who in the East. He is a former Little League coach, serves on the mayor's advisory council, is a past president of the New York Chamber of Commerce Executives and is now vice president of a four-state executive group from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Cane is married to the former Lenore Freedman of Plattsburgh. They have a

Report Several Ways To Stop It for Karen

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — A neurologist who supported efforts of Karen Ann Quinlan's parents to allow the comatose young woman to die says there are several ways the doctors can withdraw treatment that has sustained her.

Although turning off a mechanical respirator has been the main method at issue, Dr. Julius Korein of the New York University Medical School said other possibilities include no longer giving her antibiotics to ward off infection and not turning her every two hours, which protects against bed sores and pneumonia.

Miss Quinlan, 22, has lain unconscious at St. Clare's Hospital in Denville, N.J., after collapsing from a combination of drugs and alcohol and suffering brain damage diagnosed as irreversible.

The New Jersey Supreme Court recently gave her adoptive parents, Joseph and Julia Quinlan of Morristown, N.J., the right to end Karen's life if they can convince a medical ethics board there is no hope Karen will ever recover.

While New Jersey authorities, the hospital, and Karen's doctors have decided not to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, Miss Quinlan's two former court-appointed guardians have not yet made up his minds.

The Concept There; The Money Is Lacking

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey said Saturday proposals under discussion among state and city offic4als and legislative leaders to work out a compromise budget plan for the city's school system are "close in concept" but "it's very hard to find the money."

Meetings resumed Saturday in the governor's Manhattan office to find a solution acceptable enough to thwart a threatened second override attempt next Tuesday of Carey's veto of the Stavisky bill, which would force the city to mandate 20 per cent of its budget for education.

Attending the session were Stephen Berger, executive director of the Emergency Financial Control Board; Senate Minority Leader Manfred Ohrenstein; and representatives of other legislative leaders, the governor, Mayor Abraham D. Beame and the board of education. The meetings were expected to continue Sunday.

Carey, speaking to reporters while attending a groundbreaking ceremony for a new facility at the New York University Medical School, said a compromise would ensure "more contact between the teachers and pupils in the classroom."

Supporters of the vetoed bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Leonard P. Stavisky, D-Queens, want public school funds restored to avert new teacher layoffs, prevent further increases — and possibly allow reductions — in class size, curtail the number of school closings and restore a full school day.

Meets Moslem Demand

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanon's Parliament met in extraordinary session Saturday in a no-man's land in Beirut and amended the constitution to permit replacement of President Suleiman Franjieh—the leftist Moslem price for peace.

Truce violations added more casualties to the thousands killed and wounded in the one year of civil war but deputies said there was no doubt the cease-fire due to expire Monday would be extended.

The session in a heavily guarded yellowstone villa in a neutral strip dividing Moslem and Christian areas of Beirut lasted only 15 minutes and was attended by 89 deputies out of the 98-man House. They voted unanimously to amend the constitution to permit immediate election of a president to replace Franjieh.

Franjieh, the target of leftist in their campaign to bring about political and social reforms, has said he would leave office until his term expires in September. But both U.S. special envoy L. Dean Brown and French Ambassador Georges Gorse urged him step aside, and political sources said they expected Franjieh would do so now.

There was no immediate comment from Franjieh.

"Tantalize" comes from the name of Tantalus who, in Greek mythology, was condemned to stand up to his chin in water under a luscious fruit tree, always beyond his reach.

Report Several Ways To Stop It for Karen

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — A neurologist who supported efforts of Karen Ann Quinlan's parents to allow the comatose young woman to die says there are several ways the doctors can withdraw treatment that has sustained her.

Although turning off a mechanical respirator has been the main method at issue, Dr. Julius Korein of the New York University Medical School said other possibilities include no longer giving her antibiotics to ward off infection and not turning her every two hours, which protects against bed sores and pneumonia.

Miss Quinlan, 22, has lain unconscious at St. Clare's Hospital in Denville, N.J., after collapsing from a combination of drugs and alcohol and suffering brain damage diagnosed as irreversible.

The New Jersey Supreme Court recently gave her adoptive parents, Joseph and Julia Quinlan of Morristown, N.J., the right to end Karen's life if they can convince a medical ethics board there is no hope Karen will ever recover.

While New Jersey authorities, the hospital, and Karen's doctors have decided not to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, Miss Quinlan's two former court-appointed guardians have not yet made up his minds.

Carey Proposes Malpractice Measures

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — A series of measures to deal with the gnawing problem of the availability of medical malpractice insurance for doctors and hospitals was proposed Saturday by Gov. Hugh Carey.

However the Republican chairman of the Senate Health Committee said the governor's proposals 'don't go far enough to ward off an impending crisis.'

Legislation proposed by Carey would:

— Reduce lawyers' fees on awards of more than $100,000 to 15 per cent.

— Require itemization of elements of an award such as for lost income or for pain and suffering.

— Overhaul the Medical Malpractice Insurance Association board created last year to guarantee the availability of insurance by expanding its coverage limit and adding two public members.

— Mandate that insurance companies cover the cost of a second medical opinion about the need for surgery.

Sen. Tarky Lombardi of Syracuse, who heads the Senate Health Committee, said he endorsed most of the governor's recommendations but added that "this crisis will stay with us unless we make major changes."

Revisions in the tort law which governs a person's right to sue and other measures approved by the legislature have generally "stabilized" the availablity and cost of malpractice coverage for doctors, but, according to Lombardi, "the issue remains a timebomb ticking away."

As far as hospital coverage is concerned, Lombardi said the problem is more imminent as many hospitals are finding it very difficult this year" to find coverage at an affordable rate.

Hospital insurance rates have been going up "by 1,000, 2,000 and 3,000 per cent," Lombardi said.

In addition to the Carey's proposals, Lombardi said he favored legislation to:

— Eliminate the right to a jury trial in malpractice cases and have claims handled in a manner similar to workmen's compensation or binding arbitration.

— Expanding the board by five members to give medical and public members a majority control over insurance industry representatives.

Carey said his recommendations implement several of the recommendations of the Special Advisory Panel on Medical Malpractice which was headed by William J. McGill, president of Columbia University.

Denies Band Backed Protest

KINGSTON—Some reverberations — in this case created by several members of the drum section of the Kingston High School Marching Band — persist following the New York State Senate's visit to Kingston last week, and the greeting the senators received from about a dozen students from the State University College at New Paltz.

While the senators and other dignataries were dining inside the Gov. Clinton Hotel Wednesday, the college students marched up and down the sidewalk outside, chanting slogans in opposition to state budget cuts affecting higher education.

In a story that appeared Thursday concerning that event, the Freeman reported "Some members of the Kingston High School Marching Band provided musical accompaniment for the parading student protesters."

The report has stirred the dismay of some band members and Board of Education member Doris Mulvin, whose daughter is a member of the band. They claim that the story leaves the impression that the band actually supported the protest and that the item about some band members providing "musical accompaniment for the protesters insinuates that the band displayed at least tacit approval for the demonstration.

Just the opposite is true, said Mrs. Mulvin. She said Friday that she had talked with several band members after the incident, and that all claimed that the band, in fact, tried to drown out the chants of the demonstrators by playing several songs.

According to a reporter who was at the scene and who witnessed the entire event, the college students were marching on the sidewalk in front of the hotel when the band arrived and began to line up in the street alongside the sidewalk. At one point, at least two members of the band's drum section began a drum beat that synchronized with the chants and footsteps of the demonstrators. The "musical accompaniment" occurred intermittently over the span of several minutes. A short time later the band began to warm up and then played several numbers that did partially drown out the chants of the demonstrators.

Mrs. Mulvin, who said she did not witness the event, conceded that several of the drummers may have established a rhythm that coincided with the students' rhyming chants, but she maintained that alone does not indicate the band members supported the demonstration. In fact she said, most of them did not agree with the protestors.

The reporter who wrote the story said there was no intent to suggest that the band members supported the demonstration, the 'musical accompaniment' item was mentioned only as a statement of fact.

However, the Republican chairman of the Senate Health Committee said the governor's proposals "don't go far enough to ward off an impending crisis."

Legislation proposed by Carey would:

— Forbid plaintiffs to specify dollar amounts on malpractice claims.

— Reduce lawyers' fees on awards of more than $100,000 to 15 per cent.

— Require itemization of elements of an award such as for lost income or for pain and suffering.

— Overhaul the Medical Malpractice Insurance Association board created last year to guarantee the availability of insurance by expanding its coverage limit and adding two public members.

— Mandate that insurance companies cover the cost of a second medical opinion about the need for surgery.

Sen. Tarky Lombardi of Syracuse, who heads the Senate Health Committee, said he endorsed most of the governor's recommendations, but added that "this crisis will stay with us unless we make major changes."

Revisions in the tort law which governs a person's right to sue and other measures approved by the legislature have generally "stabilized" the availablity and cost of malpractice coverage for doctors, but, according to Lombardi, "the issue remains a timebomb ticking away."

As far as hospital coverage is concerned, Lombardi said, "the problem is more imminent as many hospitals are finding it very difficult this year" to find coverage at an affordable rate.

Hospital insurance rates have been going up "by 1,000, 2,000 and 3,000 per cent," Lombardi said.

In addition to the Carey's proposals, Lombardi said he favored legislation to:

— Eliminate the right to a jury trial in malpractice cases and have claims handled in a manner similar to workmen's compensation or binding arbitration.

— Expanding the board by five members to give medical and public members a majority control over insurance industry representatives.

Carey said his recommendations implement several of the recommendations of the Special Advisory Panel on Medical Malpractice which was headed by William J. McGill, president of Columbia University.

Denies Band Backed Protest

KINGSTON—Some reverberations — in this case created by several members of the drum section of the Kingston High School Marching Band — persist following the New York State Senate's visit to Kingston last week, and the greeting the senators received from about a dozen students from the State University College at New Paltz.

While the senators and other dignataries were dining inside the Gov. Clinton Hotel Wednesday, the college students marched up and down the sidewalk outside, chanting slogans in opposition to state budget cuts affecting higher education.

In a story that appeared Thursday concerning that event, the Freeman reported: "Some members . . . of the Kingston High School Marching Band provided musical accompaniment for the parading student protesters."

The report has stirred the dismay of some band members and Board of Education member Doris Mulvin, whose daughter is a member of the band. They claim that the story leaves the impression that the band actually supported the protest, and that the item about some band members providing "musical accompaniment" for the protesters insinuates that the band displayed at least tacit approval for the demonstration.

Just the opposite is true, said Mrs. Mulvin. She said Friday that she had talked with several band members after the incident, and that all claimed that the band, in fact, tried to drown out the chants of the demonstrators by playing several songs.

According to a reporter who was at the scene and who witnessed the entire event, the college students were marching on the sidewalk in front of the hotel when the band arrived and began to line up in the street alongside the sidewalk. At one point, at least two members of the band's drum section began a drum beat that synchronized with the chants and footsteps of the demonstrators. The "musical accompaniment" occurred intermittently over the span of several minutes. A short time later, the band began to warm up and then played several numbers that did partially drown out the chants of the demonstrators.

Mrs. Mulvin, who said she did not witness the event, conceded that several of the drummers may have established a rhythm that coincided with the students' rhyming chants, but she maintained that alone does not indicate the band members supported the demonstration. In fact, she said, most of them did not agree with the protestors.

The reporter who wrote the story said there was no intent to suggest that the band members supported the demonstration; the "musical accompaniment" item was mentioned only as a statement of fact.

Strange Fire; A Big, Bad Check; The Young Burglars Return

OLIVE—For the third time in the past two years Glen Marlatt's rambling two story stone house on Traver Hollow Road caught fire Saturday afternoon and nobody seems to know how

Marlatt was treated for minor facial burns after he reported he tried to fight the blaze. Olive Fire Department personnel arrived

Fire officer Lloyd Humphrey said there was no indication of the cause of the fire which started somewhere in a crawl space above a porch on the west side of the L shaped building. He said the fire was under investigation

Olive Fire Chief Arthur Jones commented: "It's just one of those things. He figured that the department has had to go to worse fires than there." The two former fires apparently started in the attic and in a living room

Firemen Saturday remained at the scene for three hours after the 12:50 p.m. call. Humphrey reported smoke and water damage to one wing of the Marlatt residence

Bad Check

Ulster County Sheriff's Department deputies Friday arrested an 18-year-old State University College at New Paltz student at the Shokan branch of the Highland National Bank on two charges for allegedly trying to pass a bad check for $1,900

The student, eligible for youthful offender status reportedly lived at 25 South Ohioville Road, New Paltz, and was charged with possession of a forged instrument second degree and attempt to commit grand larceny, second degree, both felonies

A sheriff's department spokesman said the bank manager had been notified by Marine Midland Bank that a checkbook had been stolen Wednesday from a New Paltz professor, and called the police when the check was presented

Police said the arrested student was trying to pass the check to another student for a car advertised in the newspaper for sale. He was arraigned before Marbletown Justice Robert S Diamond and latter released from Ulster County Jail after posting $300 bail. The case was adjourned to April 30

Young Burglars

Two 14-year-old boys were arrested by state police at Rhinebeck for allegedly burglarizing two homes in the Village of Red Hook Friday night

The youths were familiar to state police, having been arrested "several times before," said one officer, for the same kind of offense. The two, former residents of a Northern Dutchess residential treatment facility, reportedly took the train from New York City to Rhinecliff and started a burglary spree from there.

Police said the two ran off when a resident of one of the houses found them inside and tried to grab them, but descriptions led to the arrests.

The problem of what to do with the pair arose. "We're trying to get a detention facility," said the trooper. "The Highland School (a regional detention facility for youth) is filled up. We may end up just shipping them back to the city."

Kingston Students' Bicentennial Salute

KINGSTON — Of all the local events held to mark Ulster County's observance of America's 200th birthday, the Bicentennial exhibition staged this week by students in the Kingston Consolidated School District may stand as the most significant contribution of all

An estimated 10,000 people streamed through the New York State Armory on Manor Avenue Wednesday and Thursday to view dozens of Bicentennial exhibits conceived and constructed by students enrolled in the local schools. Hundreds of students actively participated in the project, and were assisted by school district officials, teachers and parents.

Every school in the district participated in some way in the huge Bicentennial exhibition, but the two-day event was dominated by 15 individual displays created by each of the elementary schools.

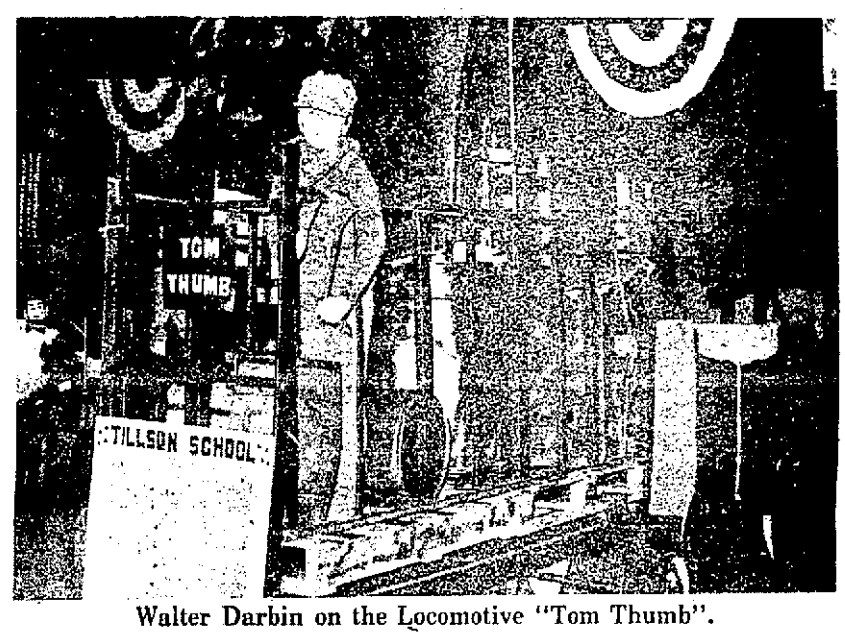

Each elementary school in the district was assigned a particular historical era, and asked to create an appropriate exhibit. In response, the students exhibited a keen sense of historical awareness and a flair for the creative that helped capture the special traditions and accomplishments of the American spirit.

The individual exhibits, in many respects, were as remarkable as the events they portrayed. Some reflected the solemnity of periods that were dominated by human suffering and sacrifice; others offered a lighter touch that captured unique American traditions and events.

The Chambers School, for instance, depicted the Depression years in a panorama that included unemployed workers trying to survive by selling apples for a nickel apiece. By contrast, students at the Anna Devine School portrayed the "Westward Move" of the late 1800's by creating a lifelike cattle town saloon, complete with bargirls and bearded cowboys. Other exhibits covered the range of American history from Henry Hudson's voyage aboard the Half Moon to astronaut John Glenn's first voyage into outer space.

John Finch, principal of the Hurley School and chairman of the Bicentennial exhibit, said that planning for the event began last year, and that hundreds — including parents, teachers, staff members, administrators and students — volunteered their time and energies to put the massive display together.

Robert Corcoran, assistant superintendant for elementary education, and Superintendent of Schools Louis A. Salzmann, were two of the major forces who brought all of the elements together and helped to solve many of the seemingly unsolvable problems.

Bicentennial Salute

Those who attended the Kingston Schools Consolidated two days of exhibits and panaromas saluting America's Bicentennial celebration weren't disappointed. It was a tremendous show, supervised by the entire school district staff and done by the students.

The New York State Armory on Manor Avenue was jammed to the rafters on both evenings. The exhibits and panaromas were a culmination of study, writing, art work and those experiences which help students learn about this country's history and heritage.

Schools from the entire district had displays, dating back to our independence in 1776 and including the present year.

Those who may wonder if the money for education is spent wisely can erase any doubt they might have. This exhibit is what education is all about.

Hurley Responds...

Judging from the calls and letters, the issue of the Hurley Recreation Area is obviously an emotional one.

The residents of Old Hurley who worked long and hard to establish the private facility at Hurley Rec are understandable annoyed. Some of the good people involved have called to describe the uphill struggle they had to establish Hurley Rec. Our opinion is that those people should not have had such a rough row to hoe. The town fathers were unsympathetic at that juncture as well. The Town Board ignores the 'quality of life' demands that should have been met.

Hurley is the most affluent of the townships in the county. And yet most towns have leisure facilities for residents that surpass Hurley's:

Marbletown: Marbletown Park on the Espous Creek: swimming facilities with 6 lifeguards, a summer program, picnic area, basketball court, baseball field, ice skating.

Rosendale: Town bought Sportsmen's Park facility last year. The voters approved this project for $195,000. There is a pool, tennis courts, softball, baseball, picnic grounds, ice skating and a pavilion.

Woodstock: swimming pool, 2 ball fields, picnic grounds, tennis courts, a summer program, ice skating and a youth center for teenagers.

All have recreation budgets in excess of $10,000.

Why should the residents of Hurley have to be content with so much less?

Callers have cried that the recreation commission wanted to spend millions on olympic pools, tennis courts, and other improvements. These were only mentioned as possible future uses for the 45 acre site. They were in no way included in the committee's recommendation to purchase the Oehler facilities.

Others pointed out that a trailer park permit had been sought by Mr. Ohler and they didn't want their children going to an area near a trailer park. No one followed it further to learn that Mr. Oehler would not have established a trailer park if he had sold the proposed complex.

Understandably, no one is looking to pay more in taxes. Those on fixed incomes are threatened even more than others. This poll and the school budget are the only taxes to which we can say"no' enough!"

But ways and means could be found to soften the minimal bite of the rec plan. A fee could have been asked of the families that chose to use the facility. The point of our editorial was that the proposal was shelved without sufficient proof that the will of the populace had been served. The comments and reasons should have been read and analyzed, and solutions sought. A straw poll is only a 'tell-tale' of how the winds of opinion are blowing, not a decision maker.

If those who feel betrayed really want the facilities, they can work to build petitions representing ten per cent of the population. This will insure a referendum. They can get more involved in town government. The northern segment of the town holds half of the voters and most of the tax dollars.

The ball is in their court.

From Some Board Members. . .

Dear Sir:

Your Editorial of Wednesday, March 31, 1976 is in need of some clarification and correction. The following comments should clarify your Editorial.

To say that Old Hurley zapped it to Those upstarts in West Hurley is an statement. Many residents that we have spoken with, both in West Hurley and Old Hurley, have expressed their own opinion, both in favor and opposed to acquisition of the Oehler property for a Recreation facility. On March 27, 1976 10:00 a.m. at the Town Hall, Main Street, Old Hurley, many of the Town residents took time (and we thank them) to witness the opening of the "straw vote" and as anyone present could verify, there was no way that anyone, including members of the Board, could tell that the returned "straw vote" was from West Hurley or Old Hurley.

It must be pointed out that the decision to poll property owners only was a joint decision of the Site Selection Committee, Recreation Committee and the Town Board. The results showed 54 per cent of the ballots returned, with 59 per cent voting No and 40 per cent voting Yes and 1 per cent void. To say that the "straw vote" was barely counted when the Town Board decided that 59 per cent "No" vote was conclusive enough to shelve the Referendum is an incorrect conclusion. Upon the above results, each Board Member evaluated all the facts presented to him from his constituents and voted accordingly.

It was not suggested as a viable alternative that the Town Dump might be available within a few years to serve West Hurley, but indeed stated "that the 6 acres now available at our Landfill area should be given consideration for future development, there will be approximately 12 acres available in a few years" to be used by all Town residents.

On the subject of Revenue Sharing Funds, to date 1972 thru April 1, 1976, the Town has received $126,646.00 and has expended $64,599.91.

To say that the taxpayers north of the Reservoir wield little power in town government is anything but an untrue statement. (sic) Speaking as members of the Town Board we welcome anyone s suggestions and encourage all residents to make their feelings and request known to the Board. Any resident has a right to be heard at a Town Board meeting.

We hope that this letter will help clarify your Editorial. Thank you for this opportunity to respond.

I recently wrote a letter to the Editor which was published on April 5, 1976. The purpose of the letter was to advise the public that I was holding a meeting for prospective candidates for the Board of Directors of the Ulster County SPCA. I would like to inform anyone interested in attending that meeting that it will be held on April 19, at 7:30 p.m. at the Heritage Savings Bank on Wall Street.

Understanding Henry

The time devoted to an inquiry into what Henry Kissinger truly believes is the fate of the United States is an exercise in morbidity except insofar as it is assumed that someome who believes himself fated to lose incapable of making the struggle gle. It simply isn't true that Henry Kissinger does not desire to make the struggle. It is an open question whether, to the extent he is convinced that our civilization is ending, he generates the kind of power you need to shed the mortal coil, and breathe again.

We must remember that pessimism about the prospects for the United States is hardly the distinguishing stigmata of jaded American liberalism. When Abraham Lincoln asked at Gettysburg whether government by the people of the people and for the people would endure, he meant precisely to be asking a question: — i.e., he was not sure of the answer. American conservatives venerate the awful vision of Orwell: he sought to tell us what it would be like to be alive in 1984 — if we pursued policies he was analyzing back in the days when Solzhenitsyn was proud of the West.

Whittaker Chambers believed that he was leaving the winning side in order to join the losing side, and over a decade in the 50's, he wrote the most moving, but none the less lugubrious, prose ever composed predicting the end of the West: a most eloquent passage of which was recalled by Ronald Reagan the same week he launched his campaign. James Burnham's classic, Suicide of the West, was published almost 15 years ago. There is a blueprint for the loss of the world. There isn't anything gone wrong in the world today which might not have been averted by acting on that volume, and its comprehensive analysis of the causes of our faltering policies.

Walker Percy, in his novel, Love in the Ruins, gives us an American version of 1934. What one might call Free Enterprise Dissolution. His vision of a future isn't that of Americans become Mao Men, as Orwell saw us; but of society atomized: without order, without services, without loyalties, institutions, conventions, prescriptions.

These, I repeat, are men whose vision of the future is itself testimony to their fear of that future; implicitly, it is their way of attempting to rouse the community to resistance to that future. What Ronald Reagan seems to be saying is that the private vision of Henry Kissinger incapacitates him from rendering effective service to avoid that vision. I do not thing that this follows. Though at the same time, I do not think we have had effective leadership. I assign the blame for that principally to Richard Nixon.

Effective leadership in a free society is, at the margin, exercised over the public. It is the President who speaks to the public. His Secretary of State is a technician. He does, to be sure, speak directly to the people's representatives. But they are taking, in the absence of redirection from their constituencies, the thoughtless, factionalist, unconcerted, disoriented actions predicted by Burnham as issuing from a clouded vision and anaemic will; and, by Chambers, as issuing out of a spiritual torpor. Either way, we lose: whether our Secretary of State is Henry Kissinger or Theodore Roosevelt.

Kissinger, who defended every tough action we took in Vietnam, is hardly the dove of recent myth. It was Kissinger who associated himself with efforts to frustrate Allende's taking power. Who spoke warnings about Portugal. Who has begged Congress not to throw away Turkey and Greece and Egypt; who railed against the aggression on Angola; who now predicts that if the Communists are invited into the governments of Western Europe, NATO will die. His are neither the words nor the deeds of a man who welcomes the day when his dark, private vision will be realized.

That leaves us with the point: can the pessimist triumph? And, put in another way, can the leader who, convinced that history has spoken its sullen and irreversible judgement, understand himself to be capable of something other than merely stalling? Is that how best to characterize our foreign policy during the Kissinger years? And is there an alternative?

The trouble — and listen carefully — is this. There is an alternative. But it is a measure of our malady that it cannot be spoken by anyone who desires to be President.

'The Dirty Dozen'

WASHINGTON—House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona is fuming mad because he was listed by a group called "Environmental Action" as one of the "Dirty Dozen" congressmen who have consistently voted against environmental bills. He also got a very low rating by the "National Council of Senior Citizens." Mr. Rhodes was so angered he released a letter signed by 77 congressmen (mostly Republicans) calling on the Fair Campaign Practices Committee to "expose" what they called "the most flagrantly unfair and perverse of all campaign practices . . . the publication of ratings of public interest groups based upon votes of narrowly selected bills . . . . "

Mr. Rhodes is, of course, right. There should be an investigation of any organization that monitors the voting record of congressmen. A congressmen's vote is a private matter between him and his wife, and should not be revealed by any public interest group whose sole purpose is to defeat him in an coming election.

It is sad on the 200th anniversary of our country that private citizens feel they should hold their legislators accountable for the way they vote in Congress.

Our forefathers, who drafted the Constitution, never intended that organizations in this country would make up lists of congressmen who had opposed legislation affecting Americans.

Anyone who lives in Washington is aware that Congress knows what is good for the people and if they vote against environmental issues or senior citizens, they are doing it only because it is for the best interests of the country. You don't have to take my word for it—ask any congressman or senator and he will tell you the same thing.

Mr. Rhodes said the House Republican Research Committee is reviewing rating practices of special interest groups and may recommend legislation to restrict them.

This is the best way to deal with the matter. If Congress cares about its integrity, it must pass a law to prevent organizations in this country from publicizing the voting records of its representatives.

I think the bill should impose stiff criminal penalties, as well as large fines, against any group of citizens who disclose, verbally or in print, the vote of any elected official of the legislative branch of government.

They should be held in contempt of Congress and lose all voting privileges for five years.

Not only should the people who revealed the vote be punished, but those who print it in pamphlets, newspapers or magazines must suffer the grave consequences of violating "congressional security."

I suggest that anyone accepting a list of the "Dirty Dozen" or a similar list be sentenced to read the Congressional Record from the first page to the last for one year.

If Congress does not want to pass a special bill they could include the penalties in the S-1 Bill, which is now being debated in Congress. S-1 is a 750-page revision of the Criminal Code, which includes harsh penalties for anyone in the government releasing confidential and top secret papers to an unauthorized source.

These measures may sound tough, but there is a serious credibility gap in the country now and people are very suspicious of their politicians. One of the reasons for this is that we are being told how they vote.

Any fair person can understand House Minority Leader Rhodes' indignation that his vote, which is the most personal thing a congressman has, would be exposed by environmentalists and senior citizens who are working for his defeat in the upcoming elections.

I usually don't like to take sides, but I hate to see anyone, Republican or Democrat, put on a list called the "Dirty Dozen." It makes you lose faith in the First Amendment and the whole principle of "the public's right to know."

Oil Juggles the Books

WASHINGTON — The nation's top oil companies, embarrassed over their recent riches, have juggled their books to conceal their good fortune from their customers.

This financial hocus-pocus — now you see the profits, now you don't — has been entirely legal. It may be the first time, however, that an industry has used flexible accounting procedures to hide profits rather than boost them.

The details have been dug out of corporate financial reports by Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., whose findings are summarized in an unpublished study. It is a treatise on creative accounting.

While the consumers have felt the painful pinch of the Arab oil squeeze, petroleum profits have soared into the wild blue yonder. This has caused the oil barons acute embarrassment

Therefore, 14 of the top 20 oil companies, according to the Hughes study, quietly "changed accounting policies, created reserves and split stock, with the effects of reported earnings ranging from reductions of .5 to 100 per cent."

The oil companies went to the wailing wall to plead that their profits weren't as exorbitant as they seemed and, anyway, that every cent was needed to explore for new oil reserves.

Yet the study shows that "the 20 largest oil companies took steps that would ease public outcry about windfall profits and reserve some portion of these profits for later years."

In 1974, for example, "when skyrocketing inflation and profits hit oil companies, nine of the 20 largest made a change" in their inventory accounting policies, the study states. This reduced "their reported income by an average of 14 per cent."

Here are some of the specifics:

— Standard of Indiana, according to the Hughes study, "issued a 100 per cent stock dividend and restated prior years' figures." The 1974 financial statement "reported $6.86 per share. Without the stock dividend, Standard would have shown $13.72 per share."

— Standard of California used a similar method to make its profits look smaller. The company "saw its income increase from $844 million in 1973 to $970 million in 1974." The distribution to the stockholders, however, "would have looked substantially more dramatic," the study notes, "had Standard not split its stock two for one in 1973."

— Atlantic Richfield shaded its profits by "writing off $21.7 million as a result of withdrawal from a Canadian tar sands project announced the previous year."

— Cities Service reduced its income by a fat $21 million "as a result of write-offs of plant, equipment and inventory costs at several locations."

— Exxon simply "added $40 million to investment reserves, which it deducted from current revenue." Another $38 million was "allocated to other reserves."

— Mobil, which has tried to mount a counter-offensive against its critics, wound up in 1974 with only a 23 per cent profit. This was small by oil industry standards. Mobil used its profits, the Hughes study charges, to purchase Marcor, the corporate complex that controls Montgomery Ward stores. Yet Mobil has been howling to the rafters that higher profits are needed to finance oil explorations.

Concludes the study: "To use (the flexible accounting) to enhance their public image to the extent done may not be scandalous, but it is at best a questionable practice."

NO FAULT: The nation's trial lawyers hired a top CIA veteran, Joseph O'Neill, to kill federal no-fault insurance. The legislation would have cost the lawyers and saved the public an estimated $1.8 billion a year.

Under no-fault, insurance companies would have been required to pay auto accident victims without regard to who caused the accidents. This would have cut out court costs and lawyers' fees. So while no-fault won't necessarily lower insurance rates, it gives the victims more of the insurance money.

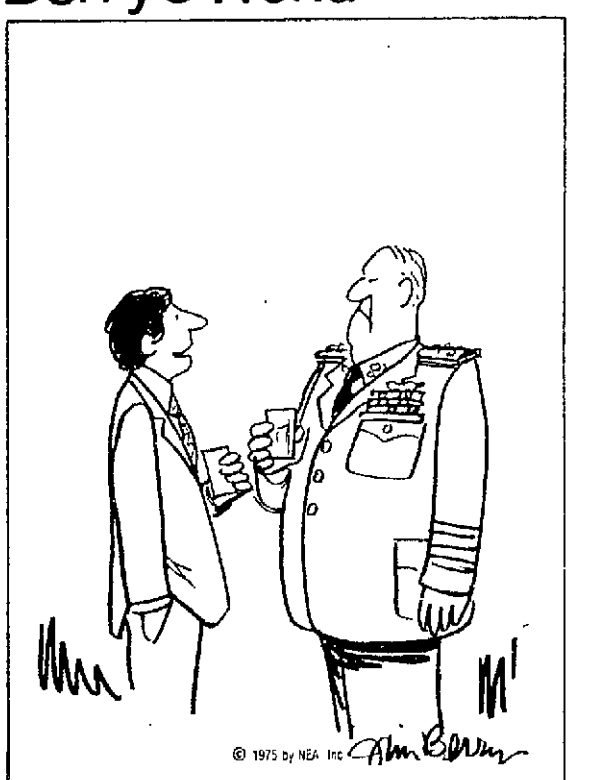

The ex-CIA man, supported by a $500,000 war chest, succeeded in obstructing the no-fault legislation. He headed a lobbying team, which also included Tom Boggs, son of the late House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, and Tom Bendor, a former consultant for Lockheed.

O'Neill and his associates defeated no-fault simply by twisting arms and slapping backs. No CIA-style dirty tricks were used.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Local banks are bombarding their Congressmen with letters opposing bank reforms. Some banks have urged their stockholders to join in the campaign... Government regulations require officials to fly tourist-class to save the taxpayers' money. This offends the dignity, however, of Veterans Administrator Richard Roudebush, who insists on traveling first class.

At least 10 UNESCO-sponsored conferences, which had been scheduled at U.S. universities, have been canceled because the Arab-Communist coalition barred Israel from a regional UNESCO group two years ago.

Bicentennial Salute

Those who attended the Kingston Schools Consolidated two days of exhibits and panaromas saluting America's Bicentennial celebration weren't disappointed. It was a tremendous show, supervised by the entire school district staff and done by the students.

The New York State Armory on Manor Avenue was jammed to the rafters on both evenings. The exhibits and panaromas were a culmination of study, writing, art work and those experiences which help students learn about this country's history and heritage.

Schools from the entire district had displays, dating back to our independence in 1776 and including the present year.

Those who may wonder if the money for education is spent wisely can erase any doubt they might have. This exhibit is what education is all about.

Hurley Responds...

Judging from the calls and letters, the issue of the Hurley Recreation Area is obviously an emotional one.

The residents of Old Hurley who worked long and hard to establish the private facility at Hurley Rec are understandable annoyed. Some of the good people involved have called to describe the uphill struggle they had to establish Hurley Rec. Our opinion is that those people should not have had such a rough row to hoe. The town fathers were unsympathetic at that juncture as well. The Town Board ignores the 'quality of life' demands that should have been met.

Hurley is the most affluent of the townships in the county. And yet most towns have leisure facilities for residents that surpass Hurley's:

Marbletown: Marbletown Park on the Espous Creek: swimming facilities with 6 lifeguards, a summer program, picnic area, basketball court, baseball field, ice skating.

Rosendale: Town bought Sportsmen's Park facility last year. The voters approved this project for $195,000. There is a pool, tennis courts, softball, baseball, picnic grounds, ice skating and a pavilion.

Woodstock: swimming pool, 2 ball fields, picnic grounds, tennis courts, a summer program, ice skating and a youth center for teenagers.

All have recreation budgets in excess of $10,000.

Why should the residents of Hurley have to be content with so much less?

Callers have cried that the recreation commission wanted to spend millions on olympic pools, tennis courts, and other improvements. These were only mentioned as possible future uses for the 45 acre site. They were in no way included in the committee's recommendation to purchase the Oehler facilities.

Others pointed out that a trailer park permit had been sought by Mr. Ohler and they didn't want their children going to an area near a trailer park. No one followed it further to learn that Mr. Oehler would not have established a trailer park if he had sold the proposed complex.

Understandably, no one is looking to pay more in taxes. Those on fixed incomes are threatened even more than others. This poll and the school budget are the only taxes to which we can say"no' enough!"

But ways and means could be found to soften the minimal bite of the rec plan. A fee could have been asked of the families that chose to use the facility. The point of our editorial was that the proposal was shelved without sufficient proof that the will of the populace had been served. The comments and reasons should have been read and analyzed, and solutions sought. A straw poll is only a 'tell-tale' of how the winds of opinion are blowing, not a decision maker.

If those who feel betrayed really want the facilities, they can work to build petitions representing ten per cent of the population. This will insure a referendum. They can get more involved in town government. The northern segment of the town holds half of the voters and most of the tax dollars.

The ball is in their court.

From Some Board Members. . .

Dear Sir:

Your Editorial of Wednesday, March 31, 1976 is in need of some clarification and correction. The following comments should clarify your Editorial.

To say that Old Hurley zapped it to Those upstarts in West Hurley is an statement. Many residents that we have spoken with, both in West Hurley and Old Hurley, have expressed their own opinion, both in favor and opposed to acquisition of the Oehler property for a Recreation facility. On March 27, 1976 10:00 a.m. at the Town Hall, Main Street, Old Hurley, many of the Town residents took time (and we thank them) to witness the opening of the "straw vote" and as anyone present could verify, there was no way that anyone, including members of the Board, could tell that the returned "straw vote" was from West Hurley or Old Hurley.

It must be pointed out that the decision to poll property owners only was a joint decision of the Site Selection Committee, Recreation Committee and the Town Board. The results showed 54 per cent of the ballots returned, with 59 per cent voting No and 40 per cent voting Yes and 1 per cent void. To say that the "straw vote" was barely counted when the Town Board decided that 59 per cent "No" vote was conclusive enough to shelve the Referendum is an incorrect conclusion. Upon the above results, each Board Member evaluated all the facts presented to him from his constituents and voted accordingly.

It was not suggested as a viable alternative that the Town Dump might be available within a few years to serve West Hurley, but indeed stated "that the 6 acres now available at our Landfill area should be given consideration for future development, there will be approximately 12 acres available in a few years" to be used by all Town residents.

On the subject of Revenue Sharing Funds, to date 1972 thru April 1, 1976, the Town has received $126,646.00 and has expended $64,599.91.

To say that the taxpayers north of the Reservoir wield little power in town government is anything but an untrue statement. (sic) Speaking as members of the Town Board we welcome anyone s suggestions and encourage all residents to make their feelings and request known to the Board. Any resident has a right to be heard at a Town Board meeting.

We hope that this letter will help clarify your Editorial. Thank you for this opportunity to respond.

I recently wrote a letter to the Editor which was published on April 5, 1976. The purpose of the letter was to advise the public that I was holding a meeting for prospective candidates for the Board of Directors of the Ulster County SPCA. The time and date of the meeting was deleted.

I would like to inform anyone interested in attending that meeting that it will be held on April 19, at 7:30 p.m. at the Heritage Savings Bank on Wall Street.

Understanding Henry

The time devoted to an inquiry into what Henry Kissinger truly believes is the fate of the United States is an exercise in morbidity except insofar as it is assumed that someome who believes himself fated to lose incapable of making the struggle gle. It simply isn't true that Henry Kissinger does not desire to make the struggle. It is an open question whether, to the extent he is convinced that our civilization is ending, he generates the kind of power you need to shed the mortal coil, and breathe again.

We must remember that pessimism about the prospects for the United States is hardly the distinguishing stigmata of jaded American liberalism. When Abraham Lincoln asked at Gettysburg whether government by the people of the people and for the people would endure, he meant precisely to be asking a question: — i.e., he was not sure of the answer. American conservatives venerate the awful vision of Orwell: he sought to tell us what it would be like to be alive in 1984 — if we pursued policies he was analyzing back in the days when Solzhenitsyn was proud of the West.

Whittaker Chambers believed that he was leaving the winning side in order to join the losing side, and over a decade in the 50's, he wrote the most moving, but none the less lugubrious, prose ever com posed predicting the end of the West: a most eloquent passage of which was recalled by Ronald Reagan the same week he launched his campaign. James Burnham's classic, Suicide of the West, was published almost 15 years ago. There is a blueprint for the loss of the world. There isn't anything gone wrong in the world today which might not have been averted by acting on that volume, and its comprehensive analysis of the causes of our faltering policies.

Walker Percy, in his novel, Love in the Ruins, gives us an American version of 1934. What one might call Free Enterprise Dissolution. His vision of a future isn't that of Americans become Mao Men, as Orwell saw us; but of society atomized: without order, without services, without loyalties, institutions, conventions, prescriptions.

Public for New Law Balanced Federal Budget

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — The mood of the electorate this year is clearly one of fiscal conservatism, with voters' views on government spending likely to assume major importance in the post-convention campaign period.

To probe this new mood, the Gallup Poll asked a representative sample of the public to vote on a proposed constitutional amendment that would require Congress to balance the federal budget each year.

The results show as many as eight in 10 voters in favor of such an amendment.

All but three states currently have laws requiring a balanced budget. The size of the Ford administration's proposed budget is $395.8 billion, with a projected deficit of $44.6 billion. The last time the budget was balanced was 1969, when a surplus of $3.2 billion was realized.

Many Economists Favor Deficit Spending

While many economists favor a balanced budget, others would argue that a law to balance the federal budget would be a handicap to the nation in a period of recession, when deficit spending is employed to spur the economy.

As pointed out by Hadley Cantril and Lloyd Free in "Political Beliefs of Americans," the public tends to be conservative on government fiscal matters but liberal on social issues. The election in November will test to a considerable extent which ideology better suits the temperament of the electorate.

Democratic Voters Also Favor Budget Law

In no other presidential election year in recent times has the issue of big government and big spending been so widely debated as it is this year, with the near-bankruptcy of several major U.S. cities undoubtedly contributing to the public's current belt-tightening mood.

Of particular interest is the finding that nearly as large a proportion of Democrats as Republicans favor a law to balance the budget, despite the fact that Republicans have traditionally been more conservative regarding fiscal matters. The crucial bloc of voters who classify themselves as independents hold views closely similar to the views of Republicans and Democrats. Following are the questions and results. As the response to the second question indicates, only 6 per cent believe it is not important to balance the budget. "Would you favor or oppose a constitutional amendment that would require Congress to balance the federal budget each year — that is, keep taxes and expenditures in balance?"

Death Penalty Return

WASHINGTON—At the very hour the Supreme Court a few days ago was hearing lawyers argue for and against the death penalty, funeral services were being held not far away in the Washington Cathedral for a murdered police captain.

Capt. James Daley of a suburban police department just outside the capital had been murdered in cold blood by a shotgun fired point blank at his head. Another policeman, John Frontczak, also was killed when the two tried to capture a young punk suspected of robbing a small bank. The suspect, apprehended after a massive police manhunt, is a 19-year-old, white, suburban high school dropout.

Three thousand policemen came to Daley's funeral from as far as Miami and Santa Monica. When a ranking police officer is killed in line of duty, his brother officers react with feelings of both sympathy and retribution.

Supreme Court justices are human too. They also read newspapers and they too react with sympathy and retribution. As Daley's casket was carried from Washington Cathedral, a lawyer at the Supreme Court was arguing that the death penalty "deters" murder and Justice Lewis Powell was agreeing that "We need some way to deter this slaughter."

When young punks, white or black, senselessly murder a policeman or storekeeper or a young girl or an old man, the perfectly human emotional response is revenge. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life.

I have no doubt that the Supreme Court in June will restore the death penalty. The court will not speak of retribution or revenge, however, because courts are supposedly guided by reason rather than emotion, and retribution and revenge are not legitimate goals of the criminal justice system in America.

So the Supreme Court will speak, as Powell spoke, of the death penalty as a deterrent to murder. The court will decide that the death penalty is not unconstitutionally cruel and unusual punishment because it deters others from committing murder. The court will declare that the death penalty protects society against this senseless slaughter.

Just as murder makes the headlines, so will the death penalty decision make the headlines and for the same reasons of emotion. Stripped of its constitutional verbiage, the Supreme Court's decision will rest on emotional grounds because, just as murder is senseless, so does the death penalty not lend itself to reason. No one has proved that the death penalty deters murder because no one can probe the minds capable of murder. Last year, not a single death penalty was carried out in the U.S., yet murder declined 1 per cent while violent crimes in general rose 9 per cent.

The death penalty can be defended only on grounds of retribution and revenge and any society or any court that considers itself above retribution and revenge must resort to self-deception.

The great danger in self-deception is that it will succeed Because murder is irrational, the death penalty will not deter murder. If the public believes the death penalty will deter murder, courts and prosecutors and politicians will not do the things that must be done to deter murder.

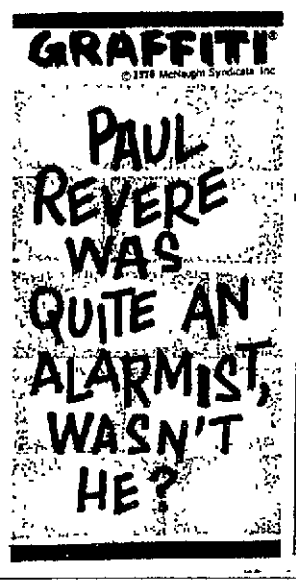

The death penalty by its very definition is punishment after the fact. But brutal, savage, senseless murders increasingly are committed by young punks who set out to rob, rape and commit other crimes of violence to satisfy other desires. Murder is an afterthought.

The only way to deter murder is to remove from society the punks who rob and rape, time after time, and thus prove their potential capacity for murder. Lock them up and throw away the keys. Instead, young punks with proven criminal records are freed to prey again until finally they graduate to murder.

The criminal justice system in America has broken down because courts let dangerous criminals free on bond. Because prosecutors let dangerous criminals plea-bargain their way to freedom. Because the nation's prisons are filled to overflowing and politicians refuse to build enough new prisons so that dangerous criminals could be removed from society.

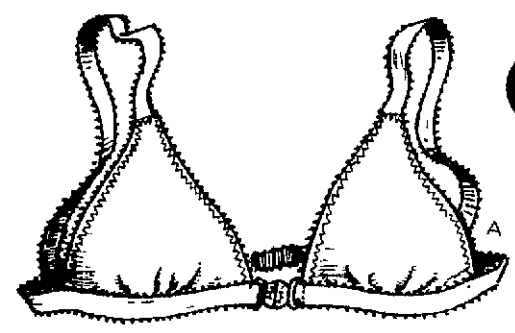

The death penalty is not the ultimate deterrent to crimes of violence. It is the ultimate self-deception.

The death penalty simply is cheaper than locking them up and throwing away the keys and it will buy neither law nor order.

Public for New Law Balanced Federal Budget

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — The mood of the electorate this year is clearly one of fiscal conservatism, with voters' views on government spending likely to assume major importance in the post-convention campaign period.

To probe this new mood, the Gallup Poll asked a representative sample of the public to vote on a proposed constitutional amendment that would require Congress to balance the federal budget each year.

The results show as many as eight in 10 voters in favor of such an amendment.

All but three states currently have laws requiring a balanced budget. The size of the Ford administration's proposed budget is $395.8 billion, with a projected deficit of $44.6 billion. The last time the budget was balanced was 1969, when a surplus of $3.2 billion was realized.

Many Economists Favor Deficit Spending

While many economists favor a balanced budget, others would argue that a law to balance the federal budget would be a handicap to the nation in a period of recession, when deficit spending is employed to spur the economy.

As pointed out by Hadley Cantril and Lloyd Free in "Political Beliefs of Americans," the public tends to be conservative on government fiscal matters but liberal on social issues. The election in November will test to a considerable extent which ideology better suits the temperament of the electorate.

Democratic Voters Also Favor Budget Law

In no other presidential election year in recent times has the issue of big government and big spending been so widely debated as it is this year, with the near-bankruptcy of several major U.S. cities undoubtedly contributing to the public's current belt-tightening mood.

Of particular interest is the finding that nearly as large a proportion of Democrats as Republicans favor a law to balance the budget, despite the fact that Republicans have traditionally been more conservative . regarding fiscal matters. The crucial bloc of voters who classify themselves as independents hold views closely similar to the views of Republicans and Democrats. Following are the questions and results. As the response to the second question indicates, only 6 per cent believe it is not important to balance the budget. "Would you favor or oppose a constitutional amendment that would require Congress to balance the federal budget each year — that is, keep taxes and expenditures in balance?"

Death Penalty Return

WASHINGTON—At the very hour the Supreme Court a few days ago was hearing lawyers argue for and against the death penalty, funeral services were being held not far away in the Washington Cathedral for a murdered police captain.

Capt. James Daley of a suburban police department just outside the capital had been murdered in cold blood by a shotgun fired point blank at his head. Another policeman, John Frontczak, also was killed when the two tried to capture a young punk suspected of robbing a small bank. The suspect, apprehended after a massive police manhunt, is a 19-year-old, white, suburban high school dropout.

Three thousand policemen came to Daley's funeral from as far as Miami and Santa Monica. When a ranking police officer is killed in line of duty, his brother officers react with feelings of both sympathy and retribution.

Supreme Court justices are human too. They also read newspapers and they too react with sympathy and retribution. As Daley's casket was carried from Washington Cathedral, a lawyer at the Supreme Court was arguing that the death penalty "deters" murder and Justice Lewis Powell was agreeing that "We need some way to deter this slaughter."

When young punks, white or black, senselessly murder a policeman or storekeeper or a young girl or an old man, the perfectly human emotional response is revenge. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life.

I have no doubt that the Supreme Court in June will restore the death penalty. The court will not speak of retribution or revenge, however, because courts are supposedly guided by reason rather than emotion, and retribution and revenge are not legitimate goals of the criminal justice system in America.

So the Supreme Court will speak, as Powell spoke, of the death penalty as a deterrent to murder. The court will decide that the death penalty is not unconstitutionally cruel and unusual punishment because it deters others from committing murder. The court will declare that the death penalty protects society against this senseless slaughter.

Just as murder makes the headlines, so will the death penalty decision make the headlines and for the same reasons of emotion. Stripped of its constitutional verbiage, the Supreme Court's decision will rest on emotional grounds because, just as murder is senseless, so does the death penalty not lend itself to reason. No one has proved that the death penalty deters murder because no one can probe the minds capable of murder. Last year, not a single death penalty was carried out in the U.S., yet murder declined 1 per cent while violent crimes in general rose 9 per cent.

The death penalty can be defended only on grounds of retribution and revenge and any society or any court that considers itself above retribution and revenge must resort to self-deception.

The Blooms of Pakistan's Poppies Alert U.S. Drug Chiefs

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (UPI) — In the valleys hidden amid steep mountains north of this provincial capital, the white and pink flowers of the opium poppy are starting to bloom.

The blooms are an alert signal to law enforcement agents from a number of Western countries, especially the United States. The are watching to see if the opium is refined into morphine base and then into heroin and, if so, who is doing it and where it is going.

One Westerner, who believes Pakistan has the potential to supply all the heroin the world demands, said, "We expect in the near future we'll see heroin refining factories in Pakistan."

So far, no Pakistani opium or its derivatives, morphine and heroin, is known to have entered the United States.

But large quantities of marijuana, hashish and hashish oil have reached America and one official estimates that 50 per cent of the hash and hash hish oil reaching Britain originates in Pakistan.

"One liter of hash oil (slightly less than a quart) that costs $5,000 here brings $80,000 in the states," said one insider.

In the past, most Pakistani opium has been used at home or smuggled into Iran, which is said to have more heroin addicts than the United States, despite harsh penalties, including death.

But Western officials here worry that if the crackdown on opium growing in Turkey is successful, and the flow from the "Golden Triangle" area of Southeast Asia is stemmed, major syndicates might turn to Pakistan.

There is evidence some have begun to do so already.

"In Lyallpur the government found a setup that included a college-educated chemist," one source said. "They had eight machines and were putting out 1,000 morphine sulphate pills a minute.

"You can get them for $400 to $500 per 1,000 pills here and in Britain get $8 a shot. You can make a pretty good bundle on a couple of million tabs."

Growing limited quantities of opium is not illegal in Pakistan. Even if it were, the central government has little control over some of the northern tribes.

Peshawar, the capital of Pakistan's northwest frontier province, is about 200 miles northwest of Lyallpur. North of Peshawar are tribal areas, where the central government can persuade, but not coerce, because central law does not extend to that area.

That's where the "Dirty Dozen" operates.

Western agents know of 12 key Pakistanis — whom they call "the dirty dozen" — who will arrange to smuggle opium from the tribal areas to other countries.

"If we try to put an undercover agent in there to make a buy, the tribal chief demands cash in advance and delivery in the tribal area," one source said. "That doesn't do us any good."

The United States has four agents from the Drug Enforcement Agency in Pakistan: two in Islamabad, the capital, and two in the port city of Karachi.

In May of 1974 one DEA agent in Islamabad was hustled out when officials learned some German smugglers had offered $50,000 to have him killed.

Since then, sources say, it has been quiet, without even an offer of a bribe, indicating the growers and smugglers are hardly intimidated by the DEA men.

U.S. officials do feel they are making some progress. Nearly $1 million in Agency for International Development (AID) funds has gone to aid Pakistan's narcotics control program.

Farmers are being urged to try other crops, such as tobacco, or, for instance, get together and start a match factory, instead of cultivating opium.

The Islamabad government has cut the number of acres on which opium can be legally grown from 3,600 two years ago to 2,700 this year. But the limits apply only in areas which are under its control — not the tribal lands.

AID has also helped provide trucks and cars for field investigation units of the Pakistan Narcotics Control Board. The aim is to catch smugglers as they emerge from the tribal areas with their contraband or when they take possession of it in an area controlled by central law.

All told, however, Western officials feel that until Pakistan itself is more concerned about the problem, their efforts will be mostly futile.

Because opium use is legal in Pakistan, many officials have a "so what" attitude.

Financiers of illegal opium pay farmers cash in advance before the crop is planted. Rain or shine, feast or famine, the farmer gets his money, often the difference between feeding his family or starving.

Rio's Fairs Easy on Budget

The Hawkers . . .

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — An hour before sunrise Rio's fashionable, beachfront Ipanema quarter is jolted awake by the clatter and clamor of a convoy of produce trucks pulling into the neighborhood's main square.

After two hours of hauling and hammering, the square is transformed into a gigantic marketplace — filled with well-dressed women, screaming hucksters and basket-laden domestic servants.

The crude level of sanitation and complete lack of American-style convenience foods would probably worry an American homemaker.

But to the Brazilian housewife the street fair means fresh food on the table and more money in the food budget.

Despite the growth of supermarket chains and government-sponsored hygenic marketplaces, Rio de Janeiro's housewives still like to do their shopping in the streets, where the food is cheaper.

This traditional shopping habit, according to government figures, provides employment to approximately 7,000 marketeers, who set up stands at 25 daily street markets, or "free fairs," which change locations daily.

Although government health regulations greatly restrict the hours of operation and types of goods for sale, the markets do a brisk business in fresh fruits and vegetables, just-caught fish and dressed chickens.

Housewives flock toward gigantic selections of greens glistening with moisture in the sunshine, perfect pyramids of tropical fruits and long tables laden with wide-mouthed fish, slimy squid and giant lobsters.

Two types of independent merchants work the fairs.

Small farmers from the outskirts of Rio, who bring their own produce into the city. And merchants who buy foreign fruits and other more exotic foods at central wholesale markets.

The government charges the hawkers a $1 rental fee for three square yards of space.

One upper middle class Ipanema housewife said she regularly shops at the fairs in her neighborhood "because the food is fresher and cheaper than that in the supermarkets."

Although the consumers support the fairs, the government regularly announces plans to curtail them. One new order calls for the use of plastic bags instead of paper ones.

"Closing the fairs would cause great unemployment," he says, lifting a large snapper for a customer to inspect.

"The fairs are a great advantage to the people because the food is cheaper and it's better, and the consumer has a lot of food to pick from."

Despite increasing governmental regulations, the fairgoers consider the street markets an essential element in Rio's food distribution system and, more important, an unshakable part of the housewife's marketing tradition.

Stewart Land $ $ Upheld

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — An appeals court has upheld an award of $791,000 — $4,250 an acre — for land appropriated for an extension of Stewart Airport near Newburgh.

The Appellate Division of State Supreme Court approved a Court of Claims award to John Belvedere for 186 acres of vacant land which were taken in August 1971 to extend the airport.

Both Belvedere and the state appealed the Court of Claims ruling. Belvedere claimed his land should have been valued at $9,500 per acre, instead of the $4,250 per acre value set by the court while the state said the value should have been $1,400 per acre.

The five-member appellate panel was unanimous in rejecting both appeals, saying their claims were "without merit."

The crude level of sanitation and complete lack of American-style convenience foods would probably worry an American homemaker.

But to the Brazilian housewife the street fair means fresh food on the table and more money in the food budget.

Despite the growth of supermarket chains and government-sponsored hygenic marketplaces, Rio de Janeiro's housewives still like to do their shopping in the streets, where the food is cheaper.

This traditional shopping habit, according to government figures, provides employment to approximately 7,000 marketeers, who set up stands at 25 daily street markets, or "free fairs," which change locations daily.

Although government health regulations greatly restrict the hours of operation and types of goods for sale, the markets do a brisk business in fresh fruits and vegetables, just-caught fish and dressed chickens.

Housewives flock toward gigantic selections of greens glistening with moisture in the sunshine, perfect pyramids of tropical fruits and long tables laden with wide-mouthed fish, slimy squid and giant lobsters.

Two types of independent merchants work the fairs.

Small farmers from the outskirts of Rio, who bring their own produce into the city. And merchants who buy foreign fruits and other more exotic foods at central wholesale markets.

The government charges the hawkers a $1 rental fee for three square yards of space.

One upper middle class Ipanema housewife said she regularly shops at the fairs in her neighborhood "because the food is fresher and cheaper than that in the supermarkets."

Although the consumers support the fairs, the government regularly announces plans to curtail them. One new order calls for the use of plastic bags instead of paper ones.

"Closing the fairs would cause great unemployment," he says, lifting a large snapper for a customer to inspect.

"The fairs are a great advantage to the people because the food is cheaper and it's better, and the consumer has a lot of food to pick from."

Despite increasing governmental regulations, the fairgoers consider the street markets an essential element in Rio's food distribution system and, more important, an unshakable part of the housewife's marketing tradition.

Stewart Land $ $ Upheld

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — An appeals court has upheld an award of $791,000 — $4,250 an acre — for land appropriated for an extension of Stewart Airport near Newburgh.

The Appellate Division of State Supreme Court approved a Court of Claims award to John Belvedere for 186 acres of vacant land which were taken in August 1971 to extend the airport.

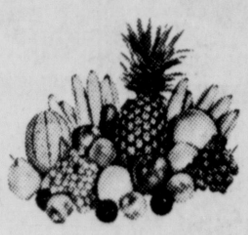

Both Belvedere and the state appealed the Court of Claims ruling. Belvedere claimed his land should have been valued at $9,500 per acre, instead of the $4,250 per acre value set by the court while the state said the value should have been $1,400 per acre.

The five-member appellate panel was unanimous in rejecting both appeals, saying their claims were "without merit."

Handshake, Agreement, Applause

KINGSTON — What started as a feisty foray between the majority and minority leaders of Ulster County Legislature last Thursday night, ended with a handshake, an agreement to "bury the hatchet" and enthusiastic applause from all the legislators

Citing what he said were 19 attacks made on the Republicans by Minority Leader Louis M. Klein, D-Dist. 6, since Jan. 1, Majority Leader Ernest J. Gardner, R-Dist. 5, took exception to Klein's having "viciously slandered and attacked" him, saying he will be "neither stampeded or intimidated"

"By innuendo and slander, through his press releases disguised as letters, Klein, as a political animal, is doing his very best to discredit any and every responsible, dedicated, Republican county official in order to serve his own political ends," Gardner concluded.

At issue was Klein's previous statements made public that Gardner stole his idea for a capital improvement plan for the county.

gardner said he "never claimed it was his own idea." He said his only claim is the submission of a resolution authorizing the plan.

He pointed out that the plan idea is in municipal law and was also advanced a number of years ago by County Planning Director Herbert Hekler.

The county board later passed Gardner's porposal unanimously with a 33-0 vote. Deputy County Clerk June Davidson; County Attorney Abram Molyneaux; the Ulster County Civil Service Commission; Clerk of the Legislature Frank Fabbie; Saugerties Town GOP Chairman Michael Catalinotto and Gardner himself, according to the majority leader.

When Klein took the floor he disputed Gardner point by point and suggested that until a court decision is reached on the appointment of Legislator Frank Spada (R-Dist. 1) that the case not be the subject of argument

Klein denied that he had been critical of Probation Director Stephen Morris, agreed that he had accused the Civil Service Commission of manipulation and said he "will do it again."

he accused Cawein of having written political releases for Savago which Cawein denied

Klein said he felt Gardner's remarks were regressive

That the battle between the two should come on the floor of the legislature surprised some onlookers but in view of Klein's repeated public attacks on the GOP, still others were surprised that it had not come about sooner. At the conclusion of the meeting it was Gardner who took the floor saying he felt neither of them could do their jobs to the best of their ability under the circumstances and he therefore suggested that the battle cease. "I'm willing to bury the hatchet," Gardner said, suggesting that Klein do the same. "I accept the offer," Klein agreed.

Tivoli Workers A Separation

TIVOLI — The Catholic Worker Farm, 85 acres of Hudson River bluff and Tivoli woodland including a decadent Colonial mansion and a 33-room mainhouse, is for sale Asking price is $175,000.

The Catholic Workers, a socialist American group founded in the early 1930s to aid the Great Depression's victims, have run their rest and rehabilitation home from the old General Watts DePeyster property for the past 12 years since Staten Island real estate prices jumped and forced them to sell property there

The proposed sale of the Tivoli property, which terminates abruptly at a cliff overlooking first the Penn Central Railroad tracks, the Hudson River, the Saugerties lighthouse and the Catskill Mountains, is because the Workers have decided to separate the young from the old at the rest home

Stanley Vishnewsky, with the Workers for 45 years since Dorothy Day first ignited the torch that has burned without flickering in inner city human reject neighborhoods, told the Freeman, "We want to decentralize and find a spot for a good working farm for the younger people, and a residence closer to the city for the older people"

He said the taxes in Tivoli were no big problem We checked with the Village clerk-treasurer Dora Gruntler, who said that DJR Management Corporation, c/o Catholic Workers at 36 E 1st Street, New York City paid $1,293 08 property taxes to the village in 1975 on two parcels of property, one off Broadway with 60 1 acres and another off Woods Road with 24 8 acres Both are for sale

The 'older people," as Vishnewski put it, are those such as himself and Dorothy Day herself, who continues to edit The Catholic Worker" from Tivoli and still sells it on street corners for the same price as in 1933 when it first came out — one cent Circulation is about 90,000 per month, and the Catholic Workers still live from hand to mouth, depending upon the good will of others to support their work

The first issue of "The Catholic Worker" was distributed at a May Day rally in Union Square in 1933, directing its purpose to ' those who are sitting on park benches those who are huddling in shelters those who are walking the streets in the all but futile search for work"

DorothY Day, now 79 has written, "I myself have often thought of our communities as concentration camps of displaced people, all of whom want community, but at the same time want privacy, a little log cabin of their own, to grow their own food, cultivate their own gardens, and seek sanctity in their own way'

The expressed goals during the depression were to help the poor, the exploited, the victims of racism, and to decry war in any of its forms The Catholic Workers demonstrated during the early 1950s against mandatory air raid drills, feeling they were conditioning the country for inevitable conflict, the Workers were staunchly opposed to the Viet nam war in the 1960s and current issues of their paper carry stories on Gandhian thought, a message from Pope Paul VI on peace cooperative landholding in France, a story tax resistance justice for farmworkers and conditions in Appalachia

The Tivoli farm, as Workers call it, has been a place where those weary or ill or in need of recuperation can come in the country to restore their souls Said Dorothy Day in January, It was easy in the summer when there was all outdoors and the magnificent view of the river and the shabby but impressive old mansion which General de Peyster put up more than 125 years ago 'A decaying mansion' at it is described now, it has given hospitality to many a student and wanderer over the years we have spent at Tivoli"

The Catholic Worker Movement is still strong and flourishing, said Stanley Vishnewski A new house has just been opened for women on Third Street in the city, just two blocks from the St Joseph s house headquarters Enthused Dorothy Day in her February newspaper column, "And money came to keep St Joseph's House going on First Street with its daily soup line and its three floors of guests, and to run the farm at Tivoli with its population of 70, more or less"

The New York Times reviewed a book March 6 by a Briton that has become, evidently, the rage among some conservation minded people The book, "Small is Beautiful," expresses the sentiment that economic systems should be structured to serve human needs and not vice versa

Old Problem

Michigan farmers have told congress farm animals contaminated with a toxic chemical are being sold in other states and the tainted feed which caused the problem is still on the market. Workers load one of some 30,000 head of cattle that have been buried in Sharon, Mich., onto a flatbed. The cattle are put in a pit and covered with 15-feet of sand in this remote part of Northwest Michigan. The problem traces back to 1973, when a PBB fire retardant chemical got mixed with animal feed. The proposed sale of the Tivoli property, which terminates abruptly at a cliff overlooking first the Penn Central Railroad tracks, the Hudson River, the Saugerties lighthouse and the Catskill Mountains, is because the Workers have decided to separate the young from the old at the rest home.

Stanley Vishnewsky, with the Workers for 45 years since Dorothy Day first ignited the torch that has burned without flickering in inner city human reject neighborhoods, told the Freeman, "We want to decentralize and find a spot for a good working farm for the younger people, and a residence closer to the city for the older people."

He said the taxes in Tivoli were no big problem. We checked with the Village clerk-treasurer Dora Gruntler, who said that DJR Management Corporation, c/o Catholic Workers at 36 E. 1st Street, New York City paid $1,293.08 property taxes to the village in 1975 on two parcels of property, one off Broadway with 60.1 acres and another off Woods Road with 24.8 acres. Both are for sale.

The "older people," as Vishnewski put it, are those such as himself and Dorothy Day herself, who continues to edit "The Catholic Worker" from Tivoli and still sells it on street corners for the same price as in 1933 when it first came out — one cent. Circulation is about 90,000 per month, and the Catholic Workers still live from hand to mouth, depending upon the good will of others to support their work.

The first issue of "The Catholic Worker" was distributed at a May Day rally in Union Square in 1933, directing its purpose to "those who are sitting on park benches . . . those who are huddling in shelters . . . those who are walking the streets in the all but futile search for work."

DorothY Day, now 79, has written, "I myself have often thought of our communities as concentration camps of displaced people, all of whom want community, but at the same time want privacy, a little log cabin of their own, to grow their own food, cultivate their own gardens, and seek sanctity in their own way."

The expressed goals during the depression were to help the poor, the exploited, the victims of racism, and to decry war in any of its forms. The Catholic Workers demonstrated during the early 1950s against mandatory air raid drills, feeling they were conditioning the country for inevitable conflict; the Workers were staunchly opposed to the Vietnam war in the 1960s, and current issues of their paper carry stories on Gandhian thought, a message from Pope Paul VI on peace; cooperative landholding in France; a story tax resistance; justice for farmworkers and conditions in Appalachia.

The Tivoli farm, as Workers call it, has been a place where those weary or ill or in need of recuperation can come in the country to restore their souls. Said Dorothy Day in January, "It was easy in the summer when there was all outdoors and the magnificent view of the river and the shabby but impressive old mansion which General de Peyster put up more than 125 years ago. 'A decaying mansion' at it is described now, it has given hospitality to many a student and wanderer over the years we have spent at Tivoli."

The Catholic Worker Movement is still strong and flourishing, said Stanley Vishnewski. A new house has just been opened for women on Third Street in the city, just two blocks from the St. Joseph's house headquarters. Enthused Dorothy Day in her February newspaper column, "And money came to keep St. Joseph's House going on First Street with its daily soup line and its three floors of guests, and to run the farm at Tivoli with its population of 70, more or less."

The New York Times reviewed a book March 6 by a Briton that has become, evidently, the rage among some conservation minded people. The book, "Small is Beautiful," expresses the sentiment that economic systems should be structured to serve human needs, and not vice versa.

Old Problem

Michigan farmers have told congress farm animals contaminated with a toxic chemical are being sold in other states and the tainted feed which caused the problem is still on the market. Workers load one of some 30,000 head of cattle that have been buried in Sharon, Mich., onto a flatbed. The cattle are put in a pit and covered with 15-feet of sand in this remote part of Northwest Michigan. The problem traces back to 1973, when a PBB fire retardant chemical got mixed with animal feed. Ulster Qualifies As Loan Area

KINGSTON—Ulster County has been designated an emergency loan area as a result of a tornado in the area of the Town of Rochester, and high winds in the areas near the Towns of Gardiner, Plattekill, Marlboro and Shawangunk March 21, it was announced this week by Ulster County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago, R-Dist. 8

The designation covers agricultural losses only. The county is seeking a similar designation from Gov. Hugh L. Carey for residential losses.

Application for physical agricultural losses will be available at the Ulster County Agricultural Stabiliaztion and Conservation Office, 380 Washington Avenue, Kingston and will be accepted through June 2. Applications for production losses will be accepted through Jan. 3, 1977.

David Squires, manager of the ASC Office said the first emergency loan report is due in the FHA office in Syracuse on April 30.

Agricultural damage has been estimated in access of $625,000. Total overall damage has been set at more than $1 million. Low interest loans are expected to be made available.

The major part of the damage was in Rochester where 55 properties sustained some loss Adsit said.

Going To The Fair

Faye E. Fogal, Miss Ulster County, will appear at the upcoming ulster County Environmental Fair to be held Sunday, May 2 at State University College at New Paltz. She is shown discussing plans for the annual event with Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago, R-Dist. 8, left and Donald Bruyn, chairman of the Environmental Council.

Probe of Napanoch Facility Called for by Senator Mason

ALBANY — State Sen. Edwyn E. Mason, R-48th Dist., has called for an investigation of a series of incidents last year at Eastern Correctional Facility at Napanoch as a result of which he says prison officers were wrongly penalized.

The request for the investigation was made in a letter to Benjamin Ward, commissioner of the Department of Correctional Services, which Mason has made public.

In his letter to Ward, Mason states:

"Late in July 1975, a number of serious incidents occurred involving inmate stabbings, and the correction officers in the institution became increasingly alarmed over these developments. On Aug. 2 and 3, there was a major confrontation, several of the inmates attacked other inmates. Some of the inmates apparently had been drinking and the officers attempted to protect those who were assaulted. Several of the inmates were seriously injured and required hospitalization. The correction officers realized a serious situation was developing and on Aug. 4, when the officers reported for work in the morning, they requested the lieutenant in charge to order a thorough search or 'general frisk' of the prison and inmates because the officers were well aware that a large number of dangerous weapons were in the possession of the prisoners."

According to Mason, the lieutenant was granted authority by the prison superintendent to conduct the search during which more than 500 dangerous weapons were found.

Mason's letter continues: "The correction officers were justifiably alarmed because their own safety and that of the inmates was threatened by the large number of dangerous weapons in the hands of the prisoners. There was no refusal to go to work, but to the amazement of the officers, charges were made against them by the superintendent, (Jerome) Patterson, and some of the officers have had two days' pay taken from and have been put on probation for a year. This certainly appears to be most unjust — these men were doing their duty, they were taking reasonable and proper steps to assure the safety of the prisoners and the institution and they certainly should not be penalized for taking the proper precautions."

Charging that the action against the officers was taken in "an arbitrary manner," Mason said the men should have been commended for their action rather than penalized.

On Jan. 10, 1901, the Spindletop oil well came in, turning Beaumont, Tex., into a boom town. Crime was so bad that the chief of police warned citizens to walk in the middle of the street after nightfall and to carry guns. "An' tote 'em in your hands, not on your hips, so everybody can see you're loaded," he said.

Spratt Declares For Onteora Board

WEST HURLEY — John Spratt of West Hurley has announced his candidacy for a position on the Onteora Central School Board of Education. He has been an area resident for twelve years and lives with his wife Peg and their three children on Nissen Court in West Hurley.

Spratt has been a trustee of the West Hurley library since 1970 and served as chairman of the library's new building program in 1975. He was president of the library's board of trustees in 1973 and 1974, vice president in 1972 and library fair chairman for several years.

His participation in area youth activities has included coaching elementary school children in St. John's C.Y.O. basketball program for the past three seasons and serving as assistant coach in the Town of Hurley minor league in 1973 and 1974. He is also a past president of the Woodstock Jaycees and past district president of the New York State Jaycees.

Spratt has kept well informed of school district activities by attending school functions, board of education meetings and participating in advisory committees, he said. He is employed as a development engineer with IBM Kingston.

Group Seeks $$ to Attend Hearings

SAUGERTIES — Saugerties Citizens to Preserve the Hudson Valley will raise funds for its participation in hearings on the nuclear power plant proposal for Cementon. The citizen group opposes the plans of the State of New York and the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission and will use the funds raised for legal fees and expert witness fees.

CPHV is a Green County-based organization opposed to the proliferation of nuclear power electric generating plants in their present stage of development and for the advancement of safe sources of energy such as solar energy. If, in the event a nuclear power plant is built in nearby Cementon, the CPHV will act as a watchdog to insure that the safest possible plant is built and operated.

The fund raising will be conducted between April 11 and May 2 on a door-to-door basis. Membership in CPHV or donations will be accepted.

Those persons not contacted during the canvass may call Fran Crist of Saugerties or send their contribution to Citizens to Preserve the Hudson Valley, PO Box 412, Catskill, 12414.

"Late in July 1975, a number of serious incidents occurred involving inmate stabbings, and the correction officers in the institution became increasingly alarmed over these developments. On Aug. 2 and 3, there was a major confrontation, several of the inmates attacked other inmates. Some of the inmates apparently had been drinking and the officers attempted to protect those who were assaulted. Several of the inmates were seriously injured and required hospitalization. The correction officers realized a serious situation was developing and on Aug. 4, when the officers reported for work in the morning, they requested the lieutenant in charge to order a thorough search or 'general frisk' of the prison and inmates because the officers were well aware that a large number of dangerous weapons were in the possession of the prisoners."

According to Mason, the lieutenant was granted authority by the prison superintendent to conduct the search during which more than 500 dangerous weapons were found.

Mason's letter continues: "The correction officers were justifiably alarmed because their own safety and that of the inmates was threatened by the large number of dangerous weapons in the hands of the prisoners. There was no refusal to go to work, but to the amazement of the officers, charges were made against them by the superintendent, (Jerome) Patterson, and some of the officers have had two days' pay taken from and have been put on probation for a year. This certainly appears to be most unjust — these men were doing their duty, they were taking reasonable and proper steps to assure the safety of the prisoners and the institution and they certainly should not be penalized for taking the proper precautions."

Charging that the action against the officers was taken in "an arbitrary manner," Mason said the men should have been commended for their action rather than penalized.

On Jan. 10, 1901, the Spindletop oil well came in, turning Beaumont, Tex., into a boom town. Crime was so bad that the chief of police warned citizens to walk in the middle of the street after nightfall and to carry guns. "An' tote 'em in your hands, not on your hips, so everybody can see you're loaded," he said.

Spratt Declares For Onteora Board

WEST HURLEY — John Spratt of West Hurley has announced his candidacy for a position on the Onteora Central School Board of Education. He has been an area resident for twelve years and lives with his wife Peg and their three children on Nissen Court in West Hurley.

Spratt has been a trustee of the West Hurley library since 1970 and served as chairman of the library's new building program in 1975. He was president of the library's board of trustees in 1973 and 1974, vice president in 1972 and library fair chairman for several years.

His participation in area youth activities has included coaching elementary school children in St. John's C.Y.O. basketball program for the past three seasons and serving as assistant coach in the Town of Hurley minor league in 1973 and 1974. He is also a past president of the Woodstock Jaycees and past district president of the New York State Jaycees.

Spratt has kept well informed of school district activities by attending school functions, board of education meetings and participating in advisory committees, he said. He is employed as a development engineer with IBM Kingston.

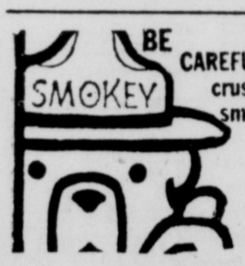

Group Seeks $$ to Attend Hearings

SAUGERTIES — Saugerties Citizens to Preserve the Hudson Valley will raise funds for its participation in hearings on the nuclear power plant proposal for Cementon. The citizen group opposes the plans of the State of New York and the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission and will use the funds raised for legal fees and expert witness fees.

CPHV is a Green County-based organization opposed to the proliferation of nuclear power electric generating plants in their present stage of development and for the advancement of safe sources of energy such as solar energy. If, in the event a nuclear power plant is built in nearby Cementon, the CPHV will act as a watchdog to insure that the safest possible plant is built and operated.

The fund raising will be conducted between April 11 and May 2 on a door-to-door basis. Membership in CPHV or donations will be accepted.

Those persons not contacted during the canvass may call Fran Crist of Saugerties or send their contribution to Citizens to Preserve the Hudson Valley, PO Box 412, Catskill, 12414.

Javits, Buckley Oppose Concorde Jet

Roll Call

WASHINGTON, D.C. — New York's U.S. Senators Jacob Javits and James L. Buckley both voted to prohibit the Concorde supersonic transport jet from landing in the United States, but the bill was defeated in 31 for and 50 against.

The French-British jets would greatly reduce flying time between the U.S. and Europe, but raise noise and environmental questions.

Secretary of Transportation William Coleman has approved landings at Washington, D.C. and New York for a 16-month trial which begins in May if local obstacles are removed

Javits and Buckley were on opposite sides of the fence when the Senate approved by a vote of 49 to 45, a motion to send back to committee and thus kill, a bill requiring that states establish no-fault auto insurance systems which meet minimum federal standards. Buckley voted for the mtoion and Javits against.

Under no-fault, which some states have already enacted, a motorist can collect injury-related expenses from his own insurance company regardless of who caused the accident. No-fault preserves the right to sue but only when damages are exceptionally high.

Supporters of the motion questioned the need for federal action on no-fault, disputed no-fault claimed economics and challenged the constitutionality of limiting one's right to sue.

Opponents favored no-fault as the means to simplify the accident claim process and ultimately lower the cost of insurance by eliminating in most cases expensive litigation now needed to establish liability for an accident.

In the House, Ulster County Congressmen Hamilton Fish Jr, R-25th Dist., and Benjamin A. Gilman, R-26th Dist. voted for a campaign finance amendment to allow the Federal Election Commission to continue issuing advisory opinions on campaign finance practices without facing congressional review. Rep. Matthew McHugh, D-27th Dist., voted no. The measure was rejected 134 for and 269 against.

The vote upheld a new requirement that the FEC's legal guidance to candidates on individual campaign finance problems and questions be subjected to the same congressional scrutiny that applies to formal regulations issued by FEC.

All three Ulster County congressmen voted for an amendment to continue the requirement tht copies of congressional campaign finance reports be filed in state capitals. The measure was passed 293 to 111.

McHugh voted with the majority when the House rejected, 160 for and 232 against, an amendment to eliminate funds for a controversial National Science Foundation curriculum development program and instead earmark the money for teacher training. Fish and Gilman approved the measure.

The amendment was proposed to a bill authorizing NSP's $811 million fiscal year 1977 budget, later passed and sent to the Senate.

The proposed amendment would have prevented NSF from using $1.4 million to continue developing textbooks and classroom materials for its human sciences program. The program is billed by NSF as an effort to upgrade elementary and secondary education in the life sciences.

Benedictine Groundbreaking Could Be May

KINGSTON — Groundbreaking for the new $12 million wing and expansion program at Benedictine Hospital could come as early as next month, according to announcement made this week by Sister Mary Charles, president of the hospital.

Requests for bids went out to contractors this week and are due back May 13.

Specifications call for the demolition of the now outmoded 1901 building, replacing it with a modern, three-story service wing housing the pharmacy, medical records, receiving area and an addition to the kitchen

Sister Mary Charles said she was extremely pleased to see this important phase of the hospital's building program come to fruition. "It has taken much time to work out the many planning details so necessary for a program of this magnitude, but it finally appears that ground breaking is within sight. I am gratified, she said, at the patience and understanding of our community, which supported the public phase of this building program so successfully in 1974."

Sister Mary Charles said that it is hoped that between now and May 13 that final approval from the Housing and Urban Development Department (HUD) will be received so that the mortgage can be signed and ground breaking take place

Benedictine has already received approval from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Javits, Buckley Oppose Concorde Jet

Roll Call

WASHINGTON, D.C. — New York's U.S. Senators Jacob Javits and James L. Buckley both voted to prohibit the Concorde supersonic transport jet from landing in the United States, but the bill was defeated in 31 for and 50 against.

The French-British jets would greatly reduce flying time between the U.S. and Europe, but raise noise and environmental questions.

Secretary of Transportation William Coleman has approved landings at Washington, D.C. and New York for a 16-month trial which begins in May if local obstacles are removed.

Javits and Buckley were on opposite sides of the fence when the Senate approved by a vote of 49 to 45, a motion to send back to committee and thus kill, a bill requiring that states establish no-fault auto insurance systems which meet minimum federal standards. Buckley voted for the mtoion and Javits against.

Under no-fault, which some states have already enacted, a motorist can collect injury-related expenses from his own insurance company regardless of who caused the accident. No-fault preserves the right to sue but only when damages are exceptionally high.

Supporters of the motion questioned the need for federal action on no-fault, disputed no-fault claimed economics and challenged the constitutionality of limiting one's right to sue.

Opponents favored no-fault as the means to simplify the accident claim process and ultimately lower the cost of insurance by eliminating in most cases expensive litigation now needed to establish liability for an accident.

In the House, Ulster County Congressmen Hamilton Fish Jr., R-25th Dist., and Benjamin A. Gilman, R-26th Dist. voted for a campaign finance amendment to allow the Federal Election Commission to continue issuing advisory opinions on campaign finance practices without facing congressional review. Rep. Matthew McHugh, D-27th Dist., voted no. The measure was rejected 134 for and 269 against.

The vote upheld a new requirement that the FEC's legal guidance to candidates on individual campaign finance problems and questions be subjected to the same congressional scrutiny that applies to formal regulations issued by FEC.

All three Ulster County congressmen voted for an amendment to continue the requirement tht copies of congressional campaign finance reports be filed in state capitals. The measure was passed 293 to 111.

McHugh voted with the majority when the House rejected, 160 for and 232 against, an amendment to eliminate funds for a controversial National Science Foundation curriculum development program and instead earmark the money for teacher training. Fish and Gilman approved the measure.

The amendment was proposed to a bill authorizing NSP's $811 million fiscal year 1977 budget, later passed and sent to the Senate.

The proposed amendment would have prevented NSF from using $1.4 million to continue developing textbooks and classroom materials for its human sciences program. The program is billed by NSF as an effort to upgrade elementary and secondary education in the life sciences.

Benedictine Groundbreaking Could Be May

KINGSTON — Groundbreaking for the new $12 million wing and expansion program at Benedictine Hospital could come as early as next month, according to announcement made this week by Sister Mary Charles, president of the hospital.

Requests for bids went out to contractors this week and are due back May 13.

Specifications call for the demolition of the now outmoded 1901 building, replacing it with a modern, three-story service wing housing the pharmacy, medical records, receiving area and an addition to the kitchen.

Sister Mary Charles said she was extremely pleased to see this important phase of the hospital's building program come to fruition. "It has taken much time to work out the many planning details so necessary for a program of this magnitude, but it finally appears that ground breaking is within sight. I am gratified, she said, at the patience and understanding of our community, which supported the public phase of this building program so successfully in 1974."

Sister Mary Charles said that it is hoped that between now and May 13 that final approval from the Housing and Urban Development Department (HUD) will be received so that the mortgage can be signed and ground breaking take place.

Benedictine has already received approval from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

War's Over But Scars Remain

HIGHWAY 1, Vietnam (UPI) — In high mountain passes and narrow coastal plains, the wounds of war still show on Highway 1.

But an old farmer, standing alongside the road near Tuy Hoa in central South Vietnam, summed up the feelings of his war-weary people.

"The war is over," he said. "We no longer fear the guns, the South Koreans, the Americans. We have a quiet life just doing our normal work. That is enough."

The lushness of Vietnam is claiming the useless spoils of war. Green is overgrowing the ugly blacks, browns and olive drabs of the shattered fighting machines.

Highway 1 itself is still wounded. Where sleek, black asphalt once was, dirt and gravel show through the holes.

Yet along her 550 miles between Saigon and Quang Ngai city far to the north, life is taking over from death, signs of peace are winning over the reminders of war.

The French built Highway 1 from Phnom Penh to Hanoi, through Saigon, to link the richest and most important parts of a rich and important colony called Indochina. Later they were to call the part around Hue the Street Without Joy.

Americans paved a good part of it, painted white lines down the middle and widened it on the flats, banked the curves.

But it is Vietnamese now.

Its villagers are forgetting about the battles which raged along and beside it, more interested in getting the farmwork done than in recalling the bad old days.

Green is everywhere now. And red, as peasants and villagers replace the temporary homes with tile and brick.

Farmers work their fields under the sun of the hot season. Fishermen slowly pole their sampans. Women walk to the village markets to buy and sell. What happened a year ago seems the furthest thing from their minds.

The police checkpoints have gone, bulldozed away in many cases to symbolize the finality of their passing. Most of the militia outposts along the wayside are unmanned.

Alongside the highway, hundreds of youths work to repair the Hanoi-Saigon rail line, Vietnam's major reunification project. Here, a bulldozer nibbles at a hill to help build a dam. There, villagers repair a bridge, fill a bomb crater.

Night falls as the traveler continues his journey down Highway 1. Now 120 miles from Saigon, there is a tenseness as the vehicles pass through Long Rung La, a forest named for the trees found there. Their leaves are used to make hats and thatched roofs.

The rumors have it that Long Rung La is a hideout for anti-government rebels. It is not safe, the rumors say, because the rebels often attack traffic at night.

But this time there is no trouble. Highway 1 carries us through the feared area without incident.

Every few kilometers, the night travelers can see the groups of oil lamps, battery-powered lights and even candles which mark the "new economic zones" which the government is sponsoring as a means of getting people out of the cities and back to the soil.

Children play on the shoulders of the highway. Teenagers in groups walk along the sides of the road, apparently on the way to an evening education meeting. Life has returned to Vietnam and Highway 1. Its residents seem confident in survival, and in peace.

This Museum Triggers a Fued

LEONDING, Austria (UPI) — A plan to convert Adolf Hitler's boyhood home from a funeral parlor to a museum has triggered a nasty feud among the residents of this Austrian town.

Alois Kreinecker, Leonding's deputy mayor, thinks it would be a fine idea. He recently presented plans for a "Museum in Hitler's House."

That ran into immediate — and bitter — opposition.

"It can't be true; it must be a joke," Mayor Leopold Finster said.

No joke, replied Kreinecker.

"We believe the building should be preserved and turned into a museum," he said.

Kreinecker said a poll taken in this town near the Danube steel city of Linz showed that 47 per cent of the 19,000 population want the dictator's house preserved. Only 13 per cent want it torn down. The remaining 40 per cent voiced no opinion.

"Perhaps in 100 or 200 years could someone think of creating a Hitler museum. But not in our lifetime," Finster protested. "Even Napoleon was honored only long after his death."

Kreinecker and Finster are political opponents. Kreinecker represents the conservative People's Party. Finster is a Socialist.

"This has nothing to do with politics," Kreinecker said. "It's just our duty to preserve historical buildings."

This historical building is an unassuming, 77-year-old, onestory country house where the young Hitler lived with his parents from 1899, when he was 10 years old, to 1905.

The German dictator made it a Nazi shrine when he visited it on March 13, 1938, the day Austria was absorbed by the Third Reich.

Hundreds of thousands of Nazis visited it, including propaganda chief Joseph Goebbels and Field Marshal Hermann Goering, who came to admire Hitler's paintings displayed there and visit his parents' grave in the cemetery nearby.

After the war, the house was taken over by the town. First it was the home of a doctor. Today it is Leonding's funeral parlor.

"This certainly is not the right place for an undertaker," Kreinecker said.

Kreinecker, a school principal, said he and other proponents of the museum idea had no intention of paying tribute to Hitler.

"All we want is to establish a museum to present our local history," Kreinecker said. "It is only natural that this museum will devote part of its space — probably one corner — to Hitler."

Kreinecker said a "Hitler museum" would also attract more visitors than just a "town museum."

Hitler has always attracted tourists to the town.

During World War II, the post office stamped all letters mailed here with a postmark proclaiming "Leonding — hometown of Our Fuehrer." Visitors came to buy postcards of Hitler's house and send them with the special stamp.

Even after the war, police keeping an eye on the house often saw pilgrims taking pictures and decorating Hitler's parents' grave with flowers.

The owner of a restaurant next door to the Fuehrer's childhood home said he was all in favor of a museum.

"Visitors can still see the bench in our restaurant where Hitler's father died (of a heart attack) in 1905," he pointed out.

But town officials said they expect no decision in the near future. The feud among Leonding's residents is likely to go on.

"One thing is certain," Kreinecker said. "The house will not be torn down. It would be a barbarous act."

Scout News

KINGSTON — Fun and a bit of frivolity led by Elsa (Marmot) Daum and Mrs. Tina Daum brought a touch of Camp Life for the delegates and guests at the recent annual meeting of the Ulster County Council of Girl Scouts at Fair Street Reformed Church. Spring in the Hudson Valley

KRIPPLEBUSH — Springtime in Ulster County doesn't arrive completely unannounced. A careful observer can discern a few clues about the advent of spring.

Bird songs become more frequent, especially in the morning, and the air is a little warmer every day.

Tulips literally flow in a graceful carpet of color around monuments, in front of public buildings, on the well manicured lawns of private homes. Apple blossoms begin to show their colors. The willows are swathed in yellow-green mist, and dogwood and magnolia buds burst in lovely profusion.

In a public opinion poll spring would easily be found the favorite time of the year. For now there is more of everything: more weddings in old chapels, more couples strolling hand-in-hand along the walkways (and they are not always young), more people sitting on benches and enjoying the sun.

Still, one of the surest signs of spring is the miracle of life returning to a world that has known the desolation of winter. As far back as the legends reach, this has been the time when man stood in awe and wonder and watched the undying truth of rebirth.

something deep inside responds to the peepers' tinkling symphony, to the fluttering of wings and to the warm magic of newborn animals.

The miracle of life is beyond denial at Ed Kelly's Cherry Hill Farm in Kripplebush. It is as inevitable and as far beyond human control as the sunrise or the phases of the moon.

When spring returns to the Kelly farm, the signs of life renewed return, too. In the baby chicks that children cannot resist touching; in the newborn goats, eagerly accepting the milk proffered by human hands; in the furry softness of rabbits snuggling close to the warmth of a friendly chest; in the contented nuzzling of piglets.

All around us we see and hear and smell the signs of life renewed as spring returns. But nowhere, perhaps, as poignantly as on a farm...for here is the Source and here is the Reason for the fertile urgency of spring.

SATURDAY, APRIL 17, will be a very special day at the Hudson Valley Wine Co. in Highland. On that day, the Easter Bunny invites children of all ages to participate in an Easter Egg and Champagne Hunt in the vineyards. Mr. Bunny has promised to supervise the event and provide surprises for all participants. The fun will begin promptly at 11:30. After the hunt, visitors will be welcome to a free winery tour and tasting. The winery is located one mile south of the Mid-Hudson Bridge on Rte. 9W.

Freeman Consumer Panel

Rating a National Staple Food . . . Hot Dogs

Charles Naccarato Shows How It's Done

In springtime the American family's fancy automatically turns to thoughts of baseball, barbecues, backyard get-togethers. What would any out-of-doors party be without one of the country's favorite foods . . . the All-American hot dog!

Of the four leading brands, Ruth Martin of Woodstock chose Oscar Mayer as her first choice. Purchased at Grand Union in Woodstock for $1.19 lb., Mrs. Martin served the hot dogs with potatoes and vegetables as a complete dinner, rather than on a roll.

"I liked their spicy taste and their firmness." They didn't expand much bigger when I put them in water. I also liked the convenience of having two separate packages of five, wrapped individually. It was practical. I could split the package and save the other five for another time."

Mrs. Martin added: "My mother-in-law ate with us that night and that's her favorite brand, too."

Second on her list was Armour (99¢ lb. at Grand Union in Kingston). "The flavor was good, but I found them to be greasier than Oscar Mayer. They puffed up a bit more, too."

Tobin's First Prize beef franks (Grand Union at Woodstock, $1.49 lb.) got her third place rating. "These expanded the most of the four brands that I tried. I could smell the spices as soon as I split the package. My husband said they were 'O.K.' "

In fourth place was Bilinski's beef and pork mixture franks (Grand Union, Kingston, $1.49 lb.) "These had a good flavor, not much grease, and were slightly spiced, but the skin was tough. My husband didn't like them, but my son did."

Mrs. Martin said she "plain cooked" all four brands. Her daughter decided: "A hot dog is a hot dog. I can't tell the difference between any of 'em."

While the hot dog may be considered one of American's most popular foods, there's always an exception to the rule.

Roberta Fingerman of High Falls admitted "my husband hates hot dogs. My children and I ate most of them."

The Fingerman family tested five brands, adding New York's American Kosher beef franks which ranked top of the list. Purchased at Shop-Rite in New Paltz at $1.39 lb., these had no fillers and "we liked them best. Even my husband would eat them."

Oscar Mayer weiners ($1.29 lb. at Shop-rite in New Paltz) were rated number two. "These had no fillers either. My only complaint is their size. They were so small, they didn't fill up the roll."

Tobin Packing Company's First Prize ($1.45 lb. at Shop-rite in New Paltz) and Bilinski (Great American, New Paltz, $1.49 lb.) were rated a tie. "They weren't bad but they do have fillers. I couldn't tell the difference. Blindfolded I wouldn't have been able to tell which was which."

Bottom of the list was Armour, the least expensive, on sale for 89¢ lb. at Shop-Rite in New Paltz. "They were so-so . . . mediocre, I'd say. "

"Many of the hot dogs had artificial ingredients, some had preservatives, or soy protein and non-fat dry milk fillers, but my kids'll eat any kind . . . they don't discriminate."

Kathy Carle of Kingston selected Armour beef hot dogs as her first choice. "They're the kind I always buy . . . nice 'n meaty. And they both boil and fry nicely. I always look for the slogan: 'Dogs kids love to bite.' "

Oscar Mayer got her second vote. However, she found they are "better fried than boiled." On the other hand, Tobin's First Prize franks (third choice) were "better boiled than fried. We found them to be kind of mealy. You couldn't so much taste the fillers as you could 'feel' it. They reminded us of the hot dogs you buy at a stand or at a baseball game. They need 'something' on 'em . . . onions and relish to help the taste."

Bilinski's beef and pork franks ranked last. "They were mushy . . . not to be boiled; we preferred them fried."

doris Shultis of Ulster Park also admitted that hot dogs were not among her favorite foods. However, she cooked up the four brands, boiled and grilled with a hot sauce, placed them on a platter numbered one, two, three, four. Six people took part in the testing. Flavor-wise the Bilinski brand won out with the greatest number selecting it as their top choice. Mrs. Shultis made her purchase at Shop-rite, 12 oz. for $1.59.

Armour (Grand Union in Port Ewen for $1.19 lb.) tied for second place with Tobin's First Prize franks ($1.29) were similar and there was very little difference in texture."

Oscar Mayer ($1.19 lb. at A & P), in last place, were judged to have "very little flavor . . . just nothing."

However, no article about hot dogs would be complete without at least a mention of a Kingston youth, Willy Short. Less than two months ago Short broke the world record for hot dog eating by consuming 22 in four minutes, 47 seconds, at Uncle George's Hot Weiner Shop on Broadway. And by so doing earned a place in the Guiness Book of World Records. Willy's brand? . . . "Dubuque."

(Two weeks from today a new consumer testing panel will be introduced to Freeman readers. They will offer their critique on two Green Giant frozen products: Holloway House Lasagna with meat and sauce and Holloway House Old Fashioned Baked Beans flavored with bacon.)

Secrets of the Common Sardine

My first surprise about sardines came when my father, who was a true gourmet, told me there is no such thing in the sea as a sardine. In general, he said, they are herrings. Only when canned, the overall name of herring is broken down to the Mediterranean pilchard, the Norwegian brisling and many other names according to the country the ocean touches, including the United States, Portugal, Canada, South Africa, Japan and Norway.

Another interesting fact about these tiny fish from the sea was that Portuguese railroad workers broiled sardines on the railroad track heated by the noonday sun and ate them for lunch.

Only recently I learned more about the virtues of sardines. They are among the best and cheapest sources of protein. Also, because of their heavy calcium content, they can be used by persons who cannot digest milk and cheese.

Why not try sardines on crackers for luncheon? Spread them attractively on a cold plate with a few sections of lemon or mash and stuff them into a freshly cut tomato. My father insisted they should have very little "fixing." I have found that he was right.

Recently I learned much more about them in February Consumer Reports.

"Brisling are small fish that are caught in Norwegian fjords with huge purse seines — fine-meshed nets that encircle thousands of fish at a time. The fish are transferred live to small holding nets in shallow water. The brisling can swim in the holding nets but can't feed. Thus the fish digest and expel their stomach contents and "clean" themselves. (The process is called thronging)."

The thronged brisling or Norwegian sardines are rather expensive because of the extensive processing of them, which includes smoking for an hour over oak fires and packing in olive oil.

According to Consumer Reports, soybean-oil is apparently the norm in Maine and Canadian sardine canneries. Also, skinless and boneless sardines from Portugal, Morocco and Spain are an entirely different kettle of fish, as fishing boats go out into the Mediterranean and Atlantic after the pilchard, which is, perhaps, the 'original' sardine.

Sardines are packed in olive oil, soybean or vegetable oil, or in tomato or mustard sauce. According to Consumer Reports, "If economical eating is your primary goal, consider cultivating a taste for sardines packed in tomato or mustard sauce."

Freeman Consumer Panel

In springtime the American family's fancy automatically turns to thoughts of baseball, barbecues, backyard get-togethers. What would any out-of-doors party be without one of the country's favorite foods . . . the All-American hot dog!

Of the four leading brands, Ruth Martin of Woodstock chose Oscar Mayer as her first choice. Purchased at Grand Union in Woodstock for $1.19 lb., Mrs. Martin served the hot dogs with potatoes and vegetables as a complete dinner, rather than on a roll.

"I liked their spicy taste and their firmness." They didn't expand much bigger when I put them in water. I also liked the convenience of having two separate packages of five, wrapped individually. It was practical. I could split the package and save the other five for another time."

Mrs. Martin added: "My mother-in-law ate with us that night and that's her favorite brand, too."

Second on her list was Armour (99¢ lb. at Grand Union in Kingston). "The flavor was good, but I found them to be greasier than Oscar Mayer. They puffed up a bit more, too."

Tobin's First Prize beef franks (Grand Union at Woodstock, $1.49 lb.) got her third place rating. "These expanded the most of the four brands that I tried. I could smell the spices as soon as I split the package. My husband said they were 'O.K.' "

In fourth place was Bilinski's beef and pork mixture franks (Grand Union, Kingston, $1.49 lb.) "These had a good flavor, not much grease, and were slightly spiced, but the skin was tough. My husband didn't like them, but my son did."

Mrs. Martin said she "plain cooked" all four brands. Her daughter decided: "A hot dog is a hot dog. I can't tell the difference between any of 'em."

While the hot dog may be considered one of American's most popular foods, there's always an exception to the rule.

Roberta Fingerman of High Falls admitted "my husband hates hot dogs. My children and I ate most of them."

The Fingerman family tested five brands, adding New York's American Kosher beef franks which ranked top of the list. Purchased at Shop-Rite in New Paltz at $1.39 lb., these had no fillers and "we liked them best. Even my husband would eat them."

Oscar Mayer weiners ($1.29 lb. at Shop-rite in New Paltz) were rated number two. "These had no fillers either. My only complaint is their size. They were so small, they didn't fill up the roll."

Tobin Packing Company's First Prize ($1.45 lb. at Shop-rite in New Paltz) and Bilinski (Great American, New Paltz, $1.49 lb.) were rated a tie. "They weren't bad but they do have fillers. I couldn't tell the difference. Blindfolded I wouldn't have been able to tell which was which."

Bottom of the list was Armour, the least expensive, on sale for 89¢ lb. at Shop-Rite in New Paltz. "They were so-so . . . mediocre, I'd say. "

"Many of the hot dogs had artificial ingredients, some had preservatives, or soy protein and non-fat dry milk fillers, but my kids'll eat any kind . . . they don't discriminate."

Kathy Carle of Kingston selected Armour beef hot dogs as her first choice. "They're the kind I always buy . . . nice 'n meaty. And they both boil and fry nicely. I always look for the slogan: 'Dogs kids love to bite.' "

Oscar Mayer got her second vote. However, she found they are "better fried than boiled." On the other hand, Tobin's First Prize franks (third choice) were "better boiled than fried. We found them to be kind of mealy. You couldn't so much taste the fillers as you could 'feel' it. They reminded us of the hot dogs you buy at a stand or at a baseball game. They need 'something' on 'em . . . onions and relish to help the taste."

Bilinski's beef and pork franks ranked last. "They were mushy . . . not to be boiled; we preferred them fried."

doris Shultis of Ulster Park also admitted that hot dogs were not among her favorite foods. However, she cooked up the four brands, boiled and grilled with a hot sauce, placed them on a platter numbered one, two, three, four. Six people took part in the testing. Flavor-wise the Bilinski brand won out with the greatest number selecting it as their top choice. Mrs. Shultis made her purchase at Shop-rite, 12 oz. for $1.59.

Armour (Grand Union in Port Ewen for $1.19 lb.) tied for second place with Tobin's First Prize franks ($1.29) were similar and there was very little difference in texture."

Oscar Mayer ($1.19 lb. at A & P), in last place, were judged to have "very little flavor . . . just nothing."

However, no article about hot dogs would be complete without at least a mention of a Kingston youth, Willy Short. Less than two months ago Short broke the world record for hot dog eating by consuming 22 in four minutes, 47 seconds, at Uncle George's Hot Weiner Shop on Broadway. And by so doing earned a place in the Guiness Book of World Records. Willy's brand? . . . "Dubuque."

(Two weeks from today a new consumer testing panel will be introduced to Freeman readers. They will offer their critique on two Green Giant frozen products: Holloway House Lasagna with meat and sauce and Holloway House Old Fashioned Baked Beans flavored with bacon.)

My first surprise about sardines came when my father, who was a true gourmet, told me there is no such thing in the sea as a sardine. In general, he said, they are herrings. Only when canned, the overall name of herring is broken down to the Mediterranean pilchard, the Norwegian brisling and many other names according to the country the ocean touches, including the United States, Portugal, Canada, South Africa, Japan and Norway.

Another interesting fact about these tiny fish from the sea was that Portuguese railroad workers broiled sardines on the railroad track heated by the noonday sun and ate them for lunch.

Only recently I learned more about the virtues of sardines. They are among the best and cheapest sources of protein. Also, because of their heavy calcium content, they can be used by persons who cannot digest milk and cheese.

Why not try sardines on crackers for luncheon? Spread them attractively on a cold plate with a few sections of lemon or mash and stuff them into a freshly cut tomato. My father insisted they should have very little "fixing." I have found that he was right.

Recently I learned much more about them in February Consumer Reports.

"Brisling are small fish that are caught in Norwegian fjords with huge purse seines — fine-meshed nets that encircle thousands of fish at a time. The fish are transferred live to small holding nets in shallow water. The brisling can swim in the holding nets but can't feed. Thus the fish digest and expel their stomach contents and "clean" themselves. (The process is called thronging)."

The thronged brisling or Norwegian sardines are rather expensive because of the extensive processing of them, which includes smoking for an hour over oak fires and packing in olive oil.

According to Consumer Reports, soybean-oil is apparently the norm in Maine and Canadian sardine canneries. Also, skinless and boneless sardines from Portugal, Morocco and Spain are an entirely different kettle of fish, as fishing boats go out into the Mediterranean and Atlantic after the pilchard, which is, perhaps, the 'original' sardine.

Sardines are packed in olive oil, soybean or vegetable oil, or in tomato or mustard sauce. According to Consumer Reports, "If economical eating is your primary goal, consider cultivating a taste for sardines packed in tomato or mustard sauce."

Zonta Sponsoring Life-Saving Walk

Zontas and Their Feet

KINGSTON — Zonta Walkathon will take off from Ulster Shopping Plaza Saturday, May 22 at 10 a m. and march to Kingston Plaza, with estimated arrival time at noon.

The purpose of the event is to raise initial funds for the new Chronic Hemodialysis Unit, an urgent community need, to be established at Kingston Hospital

Mickey Duncan and Kay Sullivan, co-chairpersons, urge everyone to dust off their walking shoes, be they clogs, boots, sandals or high-heeled sneakers, and join the festivities. "In 1974, we had educators, bankers, politicians, businessmen and just plain folks," said Ms. Duncan, "all united in a great cause, more than 300 strong, and we hope to top that number this year."

Kay Sullivan added that walkers and sponsors are needed, and that any Zonta member may be contacted for information.

The problem is a matter of life and death.

To quote Swen A. Larsen, executive director, American Kidney Fund, "When your kidneys stop working, you have one of three alternatives: 1) Use of an artificial kidney machine (dialysis) 2) have kidney transplant, or 3) death." Larsen decries the fact that so few kidneys are available when people need them, especially in light of the fact that kidney disease is the fourth leading killer of human beings. He implores everyone to fill out a kidney donor card, and urges cooperation through contributions. He says, "If you decide to help, try to envision a face, a child you know, a neighbor, a fellow worker, a relative. Then say to that face, "Yes, I care."

Until kidney transplants are available for every patient who needs one, the livesaving Renal Dialysis Unit is their only link between life and death. All funds raised in the Zonta Walkathon will be specifically earmarked for use by individuals who are financially unable to take advantage of the renal dialysis equipment at the hospital. The funds will be administered by a board of directors composed of local citizens of a widely varied background, appointed by Kingston Hospital.

Zonta Club, Kingston, an international service organization, composed of executive women, currently has 30 members, each of whom is a department head, or head of her own business or profession. Christine Gallop, secretary-treasurer of J & G Drywall Co., serves the group as president. Kay Sullivan, assistant vice-president, Heritage Savings Bank, is vice-president.

CAGNEY BY CAGNEY

JAMES CAGNEY
A lively, anecdotal and often amusing biography of the popular actor who tells his story from the east-side Manhattan neighborhood of his youth, to his days in vaudeville, the legitimate theatre, and on to Hollywood where he became one of the most successful stars in the history of motion pictures. Mr. Cagney writes here of his many friends, of his enemies, and of his monumental efforts to help establish the Screen Actors' Guild, and he tells many stories that took place behind the scenes in the making of some of his most famous films. This is the first, the only authentic book on James Cagney written by the man who knows the subject best, and illustrated with some photographs that have never been reproduced before.

Our Vintage Cars . . . Lights Have Place for Wicks

The other night on "Starsky and Hutch," we watched the two detectives drive their car down a one-way street, tear up two tires on a U-turn, sideswipe a semi truck, drive through a barrier and sail through the air before coming to rest on a ferry boat that had left the dock five minutes earlier. The hood sprung into mid-air and there was smoke pouring from the engine.

Did you ever wonder who buys those cars when they're finished with them? We do.

They just paint a racing stripe around each one and our kids stand there with the egg money in their hands and beg to let them tow it out of the lot.

When our children reached the driving age, we made a mistake. We said, "We are not going to buy your cars for you. Save your money and when you have enough for a car you can afford, buy it."

Some men have paid more for a necktie than our kids have paid for their cars.

We have one that was owned by a little old lady from Long Beach who only drove it when she hit a bank and drove the car non-stop to Orlando with only one oil change.

We bought another that was touted as a second car, driven only by the wife of a dealer. She just happened to be a stunt driver for a demolition derby every Friday night at the racetrack.

I used to think that when a child — especially a boy — reached the age of Clearasil, he automatically became interested in cars — what made them run, what made them stop running, how you could add little goodies under the hood for pennies a serving, and how to pick up bargains off a used-car lot.

Well, our boys never made the transition.

The other day one of them drove home a real "doggie." It was bright red with a black racing stripe along the side and twin exhausts. The paint was wet to the touch.

"How many miles does this car have on it?" asked my husband suspiciously.

"137,000. Whatya think?"

"I think they tampered with the mileage. This car is older than that. The headlights have a place for wicks."

"Somehow," said my husband, "it looks familiar."

"It should," said our son. "Remember the car that scaled a mountain? Tested its supension on 136 miles of railroad track? Stopped on a wet road? Had its battery light up a football field? Submerged in a lake to test its airtight body? Get ripped to shreds on the Baja? And crashed through a paper hoop with Platformate? This is the little baby that did it!"

Dear Abby

Her Mom Is Always Around

DEAR ABBY: Where do you live that you have not heard of a hostess who plans a successful dinner party by matching her guests' interests and, yes, sexes?

I am a female psychiatrist, and I wouldn't even think of starting a therapeutic group unless the sexes were matched more or less equally.

Who, male or female, feels comfortable in a group of, say, six females and two males? Do you?—N. Y. PSYCHIATRIST

DEAR PSYCHIATRIST: Certainly! A dinner party is not a therapeutic group, and all one needs for a successful party is stimulating company—be they male or female— —unless they plan to pair off and go to bed.

DEAR ABBY: John and I were married just three months after my father died, so Mom talked us into moving in with her. We get free room and board, although John and I both work and can afford to pay her. (Dad left her fairly well off.)

Now the problem: Mom expects us to take her everywhere we go. If we don't, she pouts for a week. When we have company, Mom dominates the conversation. We've never had a trip without her. We have no privacy at all.

It's been six years, and John is fed up. So am I, but every time I mention leaving, Mom cries and begs us to stay. If we live with her, she has promised that she'll leave the house and everything to me when she dies. (I have two married brothers.)

Mom is only 52, but she won't even try to make a life of her own. She keeps nagging us to have a baby, but we're not even sure we want children. Please help me.—TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: Your "free" room and board is costing you far more than it's worth. Move out. Your mother will never make a life of her own as long as you make one for her—and sacrifice your own privacy in the process.

DEAR ABBY: I am going steady with a girl on my block. She's 10 and I'm 11. She gave me her I.D. bracelet, and I gave her my frog. She has gotten very bossy lately, and I would like to break off with her. How should I go about it? —ALLEN

DEAR ALLEN: Return her I.D. bracelet and tell her you don't want to go steady anymore. Then ask for your frog. But hurry before the frog croaks.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JOHN C.: Even if you aren't without sin, cast the first stone. And make it a diamond.

Plant Heights Important Vital For the Borders

In a garden that stands in the open and can be seen from various points of view, thee arrangement of flowers according to heights should be considered, of course.

But in a border planting where you are limited in the ways you can view them, flower heights and their relation to one another are all important. Without careful planning small plants may be obscured by taller ones.

To help with your planning you will find that flower heights are usually shown on seed packets as well as in seed catalogs. These are not 100 per cent reliable but at least they give you, with a fair degree of accuracy, probable heights.

In each of the sketches flowers are arranged with the smallest ones in front and the tallest ones in the rear, while those in between form a transition. Arranged in this way all flowers may be observed.

Heights of edgings and hedgss are critical in planting borders. If the flowers you intend planting are going to be tall, avoid edgings that are too small — as in Sketch A. Here, taller plants bend over the edging and cancel out the effect originally intended for it.

A hedge obviously too tall for its location is illustrated in Sketch B. It hides most of the flowers in the border when viewed from a distance. And to see the small flowers next to the hedge, one would have to stand close to the hedge and lean over it.

Correct relationship between hedge and border planting is shown in Sketch C. Here the planting does not interfere with the hedge and the hedge, in turn, does not obscure the planting behind it.

In choosing edgings or hedges to enclose your border planting, select those that will be in good proportion to the plants within the enframement.

Ficus Great for Indoors

A truly outstanding foliage plant for the indoor garden is Ficus elastica 'Doescheri,' a beautifully variegated rubber plant that is quite different from the old-time, plain-green leaved sort (F. elastica) so popular in great grandmother's day. It's even a big improvement over the variegated form of that old timer, F. elastica variegata.

'Doescheri' has large, thick-leathery leaves, wider than those of F. variegata, and much more colorful. Leafstalks and midribs are pink, while the leaves themselves display green, gray, creamy yellow and white. The colors are clear and fresh, and they don't dull with age. Best of all, the coloring is stable, never reverting to plain green as some of the highly colored cultivars are apt to .o.

Like so many other plants in the Ficus genus, this is an excellent house plant, particularly because it doesn't require full sun. A partially shaded, warm location suits it perfectly; other than this, about all it needs is rich, loamy soil and water when the soil begins to feel dry.

In common with other broad-leaved plants, 'Doescheri' tends to collect dust and grime on its leaf surfaces. certainly detracts from its beauty. If the leaves can't be kept clean by simple showering, wash each one individually. To do this, I dissolve baby soap (not detergent) in lukewarm water to make a rich solution. Doing one leaf at a time, I put my hand beneath it for support, and wipe gently from the leaf base toward the tip with a cotton ball or square sopped lightly in the soapy water.

This is followed immediately with a rinsing by wiping with cotton that has been dipped in plain water. Have a good supply of cotton on hand when you start, for pieces should be discarded as soon as they become very soiled, and fresh ones used. This is especially important for the rinsing process. I start at the top of a plant and work down so that drips will fall on leaves yet to be cleaned, and the floor or carpet is protected with a thick layer of newspapers to absorb any persistent drips or trickles.

If you do a thorough job of both washing and rinsing, hand-drying each leaf shouldn't be necessary. But, if you'd like a higher gloss, apply leaf polish after you've cleaned all the foliage and it is fully dry.

Questions and Answers

Q. I have a number of plants in two-and-a-half inch square plastic pots. At present, they're sitting in saucers, jar lids, and whatever I could find around the house to serve as drip-catchers. They look awful. Can you suggest something practical that would also look pretty and not cost too much?

A. I use short beverage glasses that measure about three-and-one-half inches across by the same height; I prefer colored ones that fit into a room's color scheme — blue, rose, yellow, etc. If your little plastic pots are white, setting them in these colored glass holders is especially nice for windowsills, where light will shine through them. If your pots are black, ceramic cups might be better.

Q. Is the fluoride in our water harmful to plants?

A. I have been told that recent studies indicate that fluoride seems to have an adverse effect on certain plants. With chlorine and fluorides added to our water, and the salts that some water softeners contribute to it, it's hard to know just what's safe to use, isn't it? It's a definite fact that rainwater in many areas is even worse for plants than treated water, because it can be loaded with air-born pollutants.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

Pre-Sale Fixing Usually Bad Investment

Because it is only natural for owners to want to get the highest price possible when they sell their houses, many take the advice of writers who advise putting the house in excellent condition by rehabilitation before offering for sale.

Though this seems reasonable, it is bad advice.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I have read countless articles advising prospective sellers to put the homes in excellent condition prior to offering them for sale, in order to get the highest price.

After living in our house for 25 years, our children have grown and flown the coop, and the house is too large for just the two of us. So we plan to sell it. We have received estimates for putting in a new heater, electrical wiring, modernizing the kitchen, etc. They are exhorbitant!

Do you think that this would be a wise investment? — ON OUR WAY OUT.

In spite of what many people believe, spending large sums of money modernizing and rehabilitating a house prior to sale is not a good investment. In most cases, the most a homeowner should do is fix up the house in a superficial way by painting, papering and repairing obvious defects. Large sums of money spent are almost never recovered at the time of sale.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We are about to convert our basement into a recreation room, so that our teenage children can entertain their friends. They do a lot of dancing.

I would like to put down a wooden floor instead of vinyl or asphalt tile. I seem to recall being told that wooden floors should not be put over concrete.

Is this true? — NEED EXPERT ADVICE.

Experience has shown that a wooden floor over concrete warps, buckles and is subject to rotting after a few years.

Even though the concrete floor may seem to dry, there is a considerable amount of moisture drawn through the concrete by capillary action and other means.

There are methods of sealing off moisture and allowing for the circulation of aim beneath the floor. This type of job, though, is expensive. Unless you feel you want to spend a good deal of money, stick with asphalt or vinyl tile, or one of the many similar products on the market.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: My company has just transferred me to another city, and so I must sell my house.

The real estate broker has suggested that my wife and children remain in the house until it is sold. I hate the thought of being separated from them for as long as it will take to sell the house.

Do you agree with the real estate broker? Do you think there is any logic behind his reasoning? — LOVE MY FAMILY.

Yes, I agree with the real estate broker. A house that is occupied usually sells more quickly than a vacant one. When a house is without furniture and rugs, it is likely to appear shabby. The rooms very often even look smaller.

Much as you are devoted to your family, it makes sense for you to offer the house in an occupied, furnished condition.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I am one of those "crazy clean" women that people often talk about. If my house is not spotless at all times, I'm miserable. My husband thinks I'm a nut.

My problem is that I can't work up a lather — I guess the soap doesn't dissolve properly in water. But when I soak my cleaning cloth in the water and go over the woodwork, for example, all I get are streaks. Being the way I am, this drives me up the wall.

Do you think I am using the wrong soap, or what? — JUST A NUTTY PERSON.

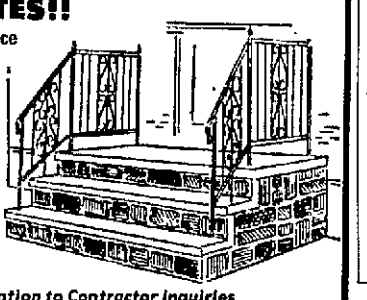

Your problem is very simple. You are bedeviled by nothing more complicated than hard water. The chemicals in the water, when combined with the materials in the soap, form waxes and gums. This results in streaks and no lather.

Your problem can be solved by having a water softener installed and connected to the incoming water pipe. You would do well to seek advice from your local plumbing inspector or municipal engineer as to which type would do the best job, since the type of chemicals causing hard water and the degree of hardness differs from locality to locality.

Plant Heights Important Vital For the Borders

In a garden that stands in the open and can be seen from various points of view, thee arrangement of flowers according to heights should be considered, of course.

But in a border planting where you are limited in the ways you can view them, flower heights and their relation to one another are all important. Without careful planning small plants may be obscured by taller ones.

To help with your planning you will find that flower heights are usually shown on seed packets as well as in seed catalogs. These are not 100 per cent reliable but at least they give you, with a fair degree of accuracy, probable heights.

In each of the sketches flowers are arranged with the smallest ones in front and the tallest ones in the rear, while those in between form a transition. Arranged in this way all flowers may be observed.

Heights of edgings and hedgss are critical in planting borders. If the flowers you intend planting are going to be tall, avoid edgings that are too small — as in Sketch A. Here, taller plants bend over the edging and cancel out the effect originally intended for it.

A hedge obviously too tall for its location is illustrated in Sketch B. It hides most of the flowers in the border when viewed from a distance. And to see the small flowers next to the hedge, one would have to stand close to the hedge and lean over it.

Correct relationship between hedge and border planting is shown in Sketch C. Here the planting does not interfere with the hedge and the hedge, in turn, does not obscure the planting behind it.

In choosing edgings or hedges to enclose your border planting, select those that will be in good proportion to the plants within the enframement.

Old Clocks at New York Flea Market

Antique dolls attract collector at Flea Market in New York

Let's Flee To The Flea Market

NEW YORK — A collection of rare and exquisite handbags, created early in the 20th century when the correct hat, bag and gloves bespoke the lady of fashion, will be shown by Sylvia Pines, Riverdale, in an Easter Sunday tribute at The New York Flea Market, 25th Street and Sixth Avenue, April 18.

A sculptor, designer and art teacher in the New York City public school system, Ms. Pines was early attracted to the extraordinary artistry of these early designs which reached its apogee in the twenties. In her collection are French and Chinese silk bags with sterling silver handles often engraved with the owner's name, created by Tiffany and Company, for a select few, bags made of the most minutely stitched petit point, cut steel beads and in imported brocades. There are handles of marcasite, coral and gold and silver studded with precious stones.

The New York Flea Market will be open through July 4, and from Sept. 12 through Oct. 17. Hours are from noon to 7 p.m., weather permitting.

This year's accent is historical with emphasis on the colonial period, in deference to the Bicentennial. Old coins and Continental currency will be featured by numismatist Stanley Schaeffer. Visitors who would like to see how their own grandparents might have looked back in the 19th century may step into rare old costumes from the overstuffed trunk of John Dornes.

The fair brings together about 120 dealers from northeastern states with diverse collections including jewelry, furniture, bric-a-brac, photographic items, coins, dolls and toys, handcraft, needlework and ephemerae from 2,000 years old to the 1950's. Old Clocks at New York Flea Market

Let's Flee To The Flea Market

NEW YORK — A collection of rare and exquisite handbags, created early in the 20th century when the correct hat, bag and gloves bespoke the lady of fashion, will be shown by Sylvia Pines, Riverdale, in an Easter Sunday tribute at The New York Flea Market, 25th Street and Sixth Avenue, April 18.

A sculptor, designer and art teacher in the New York City public school system, Ms. Pines was early attracted to the extraordinary artistry of these early designs which reached its apogee in the twenties. In her collection are French and Chinese silk bags with sterling silver handles often engraved with the owner's name, created by Tiffany and Company, for a select few, bags made of the most minutely stitched petit point, cut steel beads and in imported brocades. There are handles of marcasite, coral and gold and silver studded with precious stones.

The New York Flea Market will be open through July 4, and from Sept. 12 through Oct. 17. Hours are from noon to 7 p.m., weather permitting.

This year's accent is historical with emphasis on the colonial period, in deference to the Bicentennial. Old coins and Continental currency will be featured by numismatist Stanley Schaeffer. Visitors who would like to see how their own grandparents might have looked back in the 19th century may step into rare old costumes from the overstuffed trunk of John Dornes.

The fair brings together about 120 dealers from northeastern states with diverse collections including jewelry, furniture, bric-a-brac, photographic items, coins, dolls and toys, handcraft, needlework and ephemerae from 2,000 years old to the 1950's. You Just Can't Ignore This One

In recent months, the chorus of Eric Carmen's hit, "All By Myself" has taken on the pervasive ring of the chorus of "You're So Vain," or "Lady Maralade." It's one of those songs that it is impossible to ignore. It's possible to love it, or cry about it, or hate it, but it is not possible to ignore it. And because of that, a very deserving young man called Eric Carmen has himself a hit. (Even if one bemused reviewer did spell his name "Eric Harmen.")

While it is still a long record, the single version of "All By Myself" is, like Don McLean's hit, "American Pie," cut down from an album cut that runs seven minutes long. The album, entitled, for some reason, "Eric Carmen," came out early in November, and "All By Myself" received the lion's share of the attention the album recieved.

Up until 1974, Eric Carmen was part of an ambitious but largely unnoted group called The Raspberries. Some time ago they appeared in Kingston, in fact, as part of a big star promotion run by a midtown night spot. Most of their fans seemed to be in the younger adolescent age group, and while the group wasn't exactly bubble gum, it wasn't far from it. Let's say they were Dentyne.

Eric Carmen has come a long way from The Raspberries. Many people have interpreted the early lines of "All by Myself" as some sort of announcement of a more mature musical philsophy. ("Goodbye Raspberries, hello Rachmaninoff"?) Most reviewers thought that the whole "Eric Carmen" album represented Eric's attempt to establish a musical identity for himself. He was far less successful at that than he was at establishing that he was not after the same audience that used to like the Raspberries. Or was he? In the past three years, that audience may well have matured as much as he has.

What Eric Carmen is very good at is borrowing, as a basis for his own musical originality. At first, we were certain that we had heard "All By Myself" somewhere else — it took several weeks for us to realize that the opening bore more than a slight similarity to the Beatle's song "Help" not just in lyrics, but also in melody and emotion. The moving and lyrical piano interlude in the middle of the song is a rather unique touch, but rather out of keeping with Carmen's decidedly pop-music voice. But who could blame him for wanting to establish his ability on a keyboard? What better way than to give us a 7-minute song that could, perhaps, better have been a three-minute song and our-minute piano solo?

Eric Carmen photographs like a turn-of-the-century musician wearing the knowing half-smile of Mona Lisa. His hair style owes something to Rod Stewart, but the expression is pure Paul Simon. In any case, the image seems to be that of a serious young musician who wants to achieve recognition for his art, not for his sequined fingernails or aluminum boots.

"All By Myself," seems to be well established by now as one of the hits of 1976 — it reaches out at our ear from passing autos, the open doors of night spots, the PA system in stores, and the neighbors' stereo. Nobody has referred to the young singer as "Eric Harmen" recently. 1976 promises to be a very good year in his career — or at least a crucial one. It would be very good if Eric could establish in his future singles this year a musical identity as independent of his other influences as he has become of the Raspberries. The challenge to his listeners is to accept both his classic instrumental style with his decidedly un-classic voice. At times we find ourselves feeling as though we were listening to Jerry Lee Lewis launch into Tchaikovsky's first, or Van Cliburn performing "The Entertainer."

"All By Myself" definitely proves that, if nothing else, Eric Carmen has the ability to take a universal emotion and set it to music — to immortalize the feelings that we all have had about the balance between solitude and loneliness. It's taken half-a-decade to make it, but Eric Carmen is finally an "overnight sensation." That ought to inspire some interesting music!

KHS Students Place High In National Sandal Contest

All three students entered the national design contest, which was co-sponsored by SEVENTEEN Magazine's "At School" publication, as a project in their school art classes, according to one of their art teachers, Diana Stigbert, who encouraged the entries.

She reports that Kingston High's Art Department was very pleased to have three students place in the contest. She explains, "We have many excellent students with varied talents in our art program, so we are delighted to have three of them achieve national recognition."

Prizes in the contest were three college or design school scholarships. Winners were selected from 100 finalists by a panel of experts in the fashion and shoe design fields. The winning designs were selected on the basis of originality, creativity and suitabilitY to the sandals.

ROLLING STONE

Despite his four fine albums with Grin and spectacular guitar and keyboard work with Crazy Horse, Nils Lofgren did not come into focus as the mean rock & roller he is until last year's first solo LP. He's a classic, who makes up in aggression what he lacks in physical stature. And he lives up to this record's title.

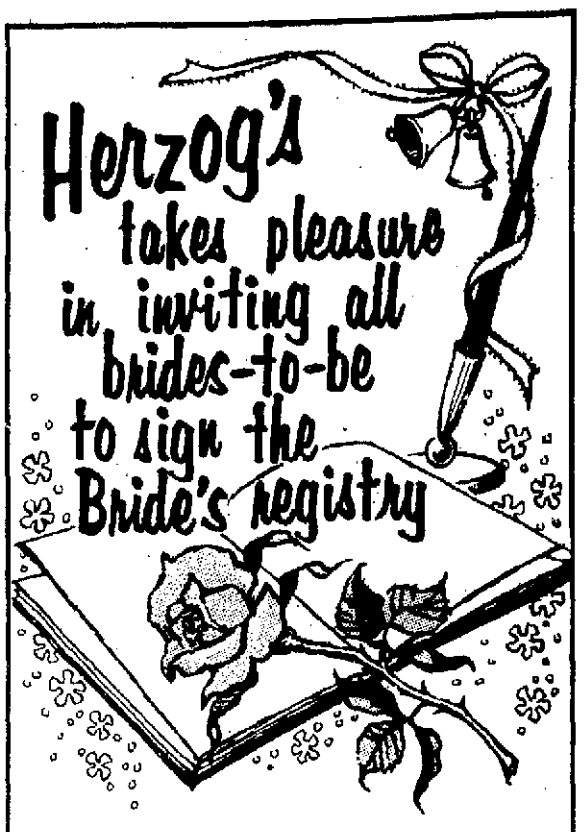

But none of his records have sold well. In an attempt to change that, on "Cry Tough!" he's used Al Kooper to supplement the production of David Briggs, who did all of his previous LPs. Briggs has always gone for a clean mix with the vocals mixed out front. But that's part of the problem: Lofgren's throaty rasp simply isn't accessible, separated from the music. Kooper uses the voice as part of a relatively dense guitar-bass-drums wall of sound, and it's much more effective. The abrasiveness isn't completely gone, but on Kooper's tracks (five of the nine here) it is modified. This has another advantage: Although Lofgren may do less soloing on the Kooper-produced songs than on any previous record, the parts seem more spectacular.

The songs are built on the staple Nils Lofgren themes: young love and the glory of rock & roll. Although they lack the reckless abandon of the best songs on the firzt solo LP, 'Jailbait,' 'It's Not a Crime' and the strange autobiography, 'Mud In Your Eye,' are all first-rate. The album's only clinker is a remake of the Yardbirds' 'For Your Love.'

Lofgren has still not shown that he can write the great Top 40 riffs and melodies he admires so much in old rock. But he's proved that he can make a commercial album. "Cry Tough!" should win him the much wider audience his talent merits.

LAURA NYRO: "Smile" (Columbia PC 33912). Nyro's first album in four years fails to deliver on the promise of her lovely early records. She is no longer interested in writing the kind of classic pop melodies that brought many of her songs, in versions by other artists, to the top of the pop charts. Instead she's going for a more exotic, jazz-tinged approach that - while occasionally interesting - ignores her real talent. Nyro is not a great singer. Her overreaching soprano is, if anything, capable of less diverse effect than anyone except Joni Mitchell. And though her lyrics apparently have a cult following, they're really more sententious than sensible. 'Wedding Bell Blues' is banal, 'Sweet Blindness' wordy and incoherent, 'Save the Children' fatuous. Of her classic numbers, only 'And When I Die' has anything cogent to say. But those numbers were recorded by artists from Blood Sweat and Tears to the Fifth Dimension to Barbra Streisand because they had thoroughly wonderful melodies. The best melody here is 'Sexy Mama,' written by Sylvia Robinson, of 'Shame Shame Shame' fame (not Smokey Robinson, as has been written almost everywhere else). Although songs like 'Children of the Junks' and 'Money' have a chance, the arrangements are so cluttered and forced they're hopeless. Nyro ought to quit trying to cross-pollinate Alice Coltrane and Carole King and go back to being the crazy kid from the Bronx we all used to love.

KHS Students Place High In National Sandal Contest

All three students entered the national design contest, which was co-sponsored by SEVENTEEN Magazine's "At School" publication, as a project in their school art classes, according to one of their art teachers, Diana Stigbert, who encouraged the entries.

She reports that Kingston High's Art Department was very pleased to have three students place in the contest. She explains, "We have many excellent students with varied talents in our art program, so we are delighted to have three of them achieve national recognition."

Prizes in the contest were three college or design school scholarships. Winners were selected from 100 finalists by a panel of experts in the fashion and shoe design fields. The winning designs were selected on the basis of originality, creativity and suitabilitY to the sandals.

'Cry Tough' He'd Like to Change

Despite his four fine albums with Grin and spectacular guitar and keyboard work with Crazy Horse, Nils Lofgren did not come into focus as the mean rock & roller he is until last year's first solo LP. He's a classic, who makes up in aggression what he lacks in physical stature. And he lives up to this record's title.

But none of his records have sold well. In an attempt to change that, on "Cry Tough!" he's used Al Kooper to supplement the production of David Briggs, who did all of his previous LPs. Briggs has always gone for a clean mix with the vocals mixed out front. But that's part of the problem: Lofgren's throaty rasp simply isn't accessible, separated from the music. Kooper uses the voice as part of a relatively dense guitar-bass-drums wall of sound, and it's much more effective. The abrasiveness isn't completely gone, but on Kooper's tracks (five of the nine here) it is modified. This has another advantage: Although Lofgren may do less soloing on the Kooper-produced songs than on any previous record, the parts seem more spectacular.

The songs are built on the staple Nils Lofgren themes: young love and the glory of rock & roll. Although they lack the reckless abandon of the best songs on the firzt solo LP, 'Jailbait,' 'It's Not a Crime' and the strange autobiography, 'Mud In Your Eye,' are all first-rate. The album's only clinker is a remake of the Yardbirds' 'For Your Love.'

Lofgren has still not shown that he can write the great Top 40 riffs and melodies he admires so much in old rock. But he's proved that he can make a commercial album. "Cry Tough!" should win him the much wider audience his talent merits.

LAURA NYRO: "Smile" (Columbia PC 33912). Nyro's first album in four years fails to deliver on the promise of her lovely early records. She is no longer interested in writing the kind of classic pop melodies that brought many of her songs, in versions by other artists, to the top of the pop charts. Instead she's going for a more exotic, jazz-tinged approach that - while occasionally interesting - ignores her real talent. Nyro is not a great singer. Her overreaching soprano is, if anything, capable of less diverse effect than anyone except Joni Mitchell. And though her lyrics apparently have a cult following, they're really more sententious than sensible. 'Wedding Bell Blues' is banal, 'Sweet Blindness' wordy and incoherent, 'Save the Children' fatuous. Of her classic numbers, only 'And When I Die' has anything cogent to say. But those numbers were recorded by artists from Blood Sweat and Tears to the Fifth Dimension to Barbra Streisand because they had thoroughly wonderful melodies. The best melody here is 'Sexy Mama,' written by Sylvia Robinson, of 'Shame Shame Shame' fame (not Smokey Robinson, as has been written almost everywhere else). Although songs like 'Children of the Junks' and 'Money' have a chance, the arrangements are so cluttered and forced they're hopeless. Nyro ought to quit trying to cross-pollinate Alice Coltrane and Carole King and go back to being the crazy kid from the Bronx we all used to love.

Floyd Eight Shots Ahead for Masters Runaway

Floyd lost three strokes on two holes where he played conservatively, trying to protect a big lead, then settled down to shoot a two-under-par 70 that left him a runaway eight shots ahead with 18 holes to play.

"One thing you can be sure of tomorrow," he said with the premature grin of a winner. "If I play safe, it's going to be safe. I just hope I don't go getting too defensive."

A five-shot leader at the start of the third round, Floyd made a bogey at one hole where he decided to aim safely for the middle of the green and missed it, and suffered a watery double bogey at another where he did the same thing and pulled the supposed "safe" shot into a pond.

Those mistakes didn't mean a thing, however, when they were stacked up against the awesome power that Floyd displayed on the par-five holes.

He made birdies at all of them—including the two water holes on the back nine that followed his double-bogey—and finished the third round with a 15-under-par total of 201.

Nicklaus, apparently beaten in a bid for a sixth Masters and 17th major title, wasn't exactly conceding, but he hardly sounded confident, either.

"I'm eight shots back, but there's no one between Raymond and myself," said Nicklaus, the defending champion. "If I get off to a good start and Raymond has a mediocre round, I'll have a chance."

For Floyd, who has made a birdie or better on every one of the par-five holes through the first three rounds, the second major championship of a rollercoaster career appears assured.

"I don't think anyone in here would bet against me at this point," he told a group of writers.

No one made a real run at Floyd Saturday and so when disaster almost struck at No. 11 he was able to handle it. The disaster was in the form of an approach shot he aimed for the middle of the green and pulled into the pond on the left, resulting in a double bogey that cut his lead at that point from six to four strokes. Earlier, he had bogeyed the fifth hole with a similar conservative but misplayed shot, so on the 12th tee Floyd decided it was time to quit playing safe.

"I've done so well going for the flag, but the only two times I changed my plans cost me a bogey and double bogey," he said. "Those were the shots I missed."

It was an easy decision to make, particularly since Floyd was virtually unchallenged— and knew it.

"I saw every number go up on every hole," he said. "I'd be lying if I said I didn't."

His courage was tested at the 13th, a 485-yard par-five with a fairway tightly guarded by the creek that winds in front of the green.

There, Floyd pushed his tee shot to the right of the fairway and underneath a tree. He never hesitated, pulled out a wood and went for the green instead of laying up safe and short of the creek—the same creek that Arnold Palmer hit twice on Friday when his hopes of making the 36-hole cut died with a triple-bogey eight.

Floyd's shot cleared the ditch and even though it strayed left of the green and into a bunker, he had no trouble getting it up-and-down for the birdie.

When Floyd flew his second shot onto the green at the 15th, another par-5 of 520 yards with a green fronted by a pond, the tournament was for all practical purposes over.

He two-putted there for another birdie that gave him an amazing total of 11 birdies and one eagle for 13 under par on the 12 par-five holes he played in the first three rounds.

The water on the other holes didn't bother Floyd, either, and when he strode up the 18th fairway to the elevated final green he was accorded the type reception usually reserved for a champion.

The rest of the field was strung out behind Nicklaus, the defending champion and a five-time winner of this, first of the four major professional golf championships around which Nicklaus and many of the other top players build their seasons.

Larry Ziegler, who matched par of 72 in the sunny, mild weather of Saturday's round, was in third place at 210, six under par and a whopping nine strokes behind Floyd.

Charles Coody, the surprise winner here in 1971, was alone in fourth at 211 following a two-under-par 70.

Tom Kite and Ben Crenshaw, who tied for the NCAA championship in 1972 while both were undergraduates at the University of Texas, were next with 212 totals, both matching par 72 Saturday.

Hubert Green and Hale Irwin, the top two money winners on this year's PGA tour and winner of five tournaments between them in 1976, were at 215 with drastically different third round scores. Green played the back nine in 42, losing three strokes to the ditches on 12 and 13, for a 78. Irwin had the day's best round, a 67.

For Floyd, the victory that almost certainly will be his is worth $40,000 in cash but represents far more in terms of personal satisfaction, his career having turned around 180 degrees after he won the PGA championship and two other tour events in 1969.

The 33-year-old Floyd went a lean six years until he won again last spring in the Kemper Open, a period which saw him drop clear out of the top 60 money winners while struggling with his swing and his lifestyle.

He solved the first problem when he took care of the second by marrying and now Floyd admits, "I wish that I had the good sense to train when I was younger."

Earlier this year, Floyd took six weeks off the tour while his wife was giving birth to his second baby but had made the cut in seven straight tournaments since coming back and this victory, assuming disaster does not strike, will be the sixth of his 13-year career.

Floyd's 201 total broke by one the Masters record for the first 54 holes set by Nicklaus in 1965 when Nicklaus set the tournament scoring record at 271. That was also the year that Jack won by nine strokes, a margin in jeopardy this year.

Player, a two-time Masters winner, had a 70 Saturday and was at even-par 216, two strokes ahead of Johnny Miller, whose third round was 74, and three in front of Lee Trevino, whose 69 was one of the best scores he ever posted on this Augusta National course, a layout he claims he can't play. Arnold Palmer missed the 36-hole cut.

Ray Floyd keeps rolling.

Messersmith Signs $1.75 Million Pact With Atlanta Braves

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Andy Messersmith, the 30-year old right-hander who won his free agency in a historic baseball decision four months ago, Saturday signed a four-year contract with Atlanta worth $1 75 million and was in uniform Saturday when the Braves met the San Diego Padres.

The only problem related to Messersmith's signing was his free agent status. General Manager Eddie Robinson called Johnny Johnson, the administrator for Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, and the agreement took place when Johnson assured all parties that Messersmith was indeed a free agent.

The problem had arisen because of an incident a week ago with the New York Yankees, who said they had reached an agreement with Osmond only to have Messersmith refuse to sign the contract. The Yankees later withdrew their offer.

Osmond called it a "lifetime contract. It's a three-year contract with renewal clauses every year. Messersmith will play as long as he can pitch."

"He'll never be traded—he'll be a Brave as long as I am," Turner said after the announcement that Messersmith will join Atlanta. "Physically, Andy says he's fine. We have four players that are good friends of Andy's and they are all tickled to death. They said there's not a better player and that was good enough for me."

The "lifetime" reference by Osmond was a strange one in that Messersmith won his key court decision bases on the grounds that a player should not be bound to one team forever.

Turner, who confessed that he became upset when Osmond failed to return his calls in the past, said he decided to take one last pitch. He asked Bristol if he'd like Messersmith and the manager simply replied, "I damned sure would". Turner, who said he made the highest offer of the many teams seeking Messersmith's services, then went after the ace right-hander.

San Diego owner Ray Kroc offered $1.5 two weeks ago and Messersmith turned it down, prompting Kroc to crack, "For my part, he can go wash cars."

Messersmith and left-hander Dave McNally both were declared free agents when arbitrator Peter Seitz ruled baseball's reserve clause was illegal last December. McNally, who started last season with the Montreal Expos, retired last summer, so he was not affected by the decision, but Messersmith a 19-game winner for the Los Angeles Dodgers last season, made himself available to the highest bidder.

The signing of Messersmith came after the Yankees had freed him of any obligation to them. The Yankees announced on March 31 they had reached an agreement with Osmond to sign Messersmith to a four-year, $1.5 million contract, but Messersmith refused to sign the actual contract when it differed from the written agreement.

The Yankees put their case before Kuhn but before the commissioner could act, the Yankees withdrew their offer for Messersmith when he made it clear that he had no intentions of playing for them.

The curly-haired Messeersmith who won 19 games for the Dodgers last season, became a free agent last Dec. 23 when Seitz declared that the reserve clause, as interpreted in the standard player contract, did not bind a player to a team for more than one year. Messersmith played without signing a contract last season.

District Court Judge John W. Oliver upheld Seitz's decision in Kansas City on Feb. 3 and a Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis delivered the knockout punch to the owners March 9 when it again upheld the original decision.

The bidding for Messersmith began last March 9 when the Dodgers officially declared him a free agent.

Besides the Braves, the Pittsburgh Pirates, California Angels, New York Mets, Kansas City Royals, Texas Rangers, Chicago White Sox, San Diego Padres and Los Angeles Dodgers participated heavily in the bidding for Messersmith's services.

At one point during negotiations with the clubs, Osmond accused the owners of collusion because he felt they were not bidding actively enough for his client and threatened suit.

In landing Messersmith, the Braves have obtained one of the leading pitchers in baseball. Twice a 20-game winner, Messersmith last season led National League pitchers in starts (40), complete games (19), shutouts (7) and innings pitched (322 1-3). He also was second in earned run average (2.29) and third in strikeouts (213).

Messersmith, who spent the last three seasons with the Dodgers after five years with the Angels, has a lifetime ERA of 2.65 and a 112-77 record.

However, it was his willingness to test —and beat—baseball's reserve clause issue for which he probably will be best remembered. Seitz's decision shook the very foundation of the game and reamins the central issue in the current squabble between the owners and players over a new basic agreement.

Both sides agree the reserve clause must now be restructured, but they have been unable to reach agreement on a workable system The hassle forced the owners to close the spring training camps earlier this month and it took an order from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to have them opened March 17.

Messersmith, who was raised in California, probably would not have gone through with his reserve clause test if the Dodgers had agreed to a "no trade" provision in their contract offer last year.

The Dodgers refused to include that provision in the contract, however, and Messersmith decided to go through with his test case. Shortly before Seitz was to make his ruling, the club agreed to grant Messersmith's "no trade" request, but by then he had gone too far to back down.

Yanks Rally, 9-7

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The New York Yankees scored five runs in the ninth inning highlighted by Chris Chambliss' two-run double and Lou Piniella's triple off the left field wall to give the New York Yankees a come-from-behind 9-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday as Don Money's ninth inning grandslam was disallowed.

Money's bases-loaded homer off Yankee reliever Dave Pagan was nullified when first base umpire Jim McKean ruled that time had been called before the pitch was made.

The Brewers led 6-4 when Mickey Rivers led off the ninth by beating out a grounder to shortstop. Tom Murphy came in to replace Jerry Augustine and struck out Roy White but Rivers stole second and then scored on Thurman Munson's infield single.

Chambliss followed with a double down the left field line to score Rivers and Munson and Piniella followed with a long triple off the left-center field wall to score Chambliss with the winning run. Graig Nettles walked to put runners on first and third and Piniella scored on Rick Dempsey's infield single as Nettles moved to third.

Nettles scored the final run of the inning on Willie Randolph's sacrifice fly.

Sparky Lyle, the fourth of six Yankee pitchers, picked up his first victory against no defeats after working just 1-3 inning. Murphy, 0-1, took the loss.

In other American League games, Baltimore stopped Boston 5-1, Oakland knocked off California 6-2 and Detroit downed Cleveland 3-1.

Tony Muser's two-run double capped an eighth inning rally as Baltimore beat Boston. Pinch-hitter Tommy Harper led off the eighth with a single, advanced to second on a wild pitch and scored the tying run on Paul Blair's double. Ken Singleton's single moved Blair to third before Lee May singled to score Blair. Bob Grich reached on a swinging bunt single and Muser's double scored Singleton and May. Brooks Robinson's sacrifice fly brought in Grich.

Willie Horton smashed a two-run second inning homer and veteran Joe Coleman pitched six shutout innings to lead Detroit to a victory over Cleveland before more than 65,000 fans in the American League opener for both teams.

Phil Garner smashed a double and a triple, drove in two runs and scored another to power Oakland to a triumph over California for the defending American League West champions' second straight victory.

In night action, Minnesota was at Texas.

Mets Zip Expos

NEW YORK (UPI) — Felix Millan's fourth inning double scored Bud Harrelson with the game's only run Saturday and Jon Matlack hurled a four-hitter to give the New York Mets a 1-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Matlack was locked in a pitching duel with southpaw Woodie Fryman. Fryman had hurled hitless ball through the first three innings when Harrelson hit a blooper which right fielder Ellis Valentine could not catch and the ball bounced by him for a tripel Millan then stroked a long fly ball over left fielder Gary Carter's head, scoring Harrelson and pinning the loss on Fryman.

Matlack yielded two singles to Tim Foli, an infield hit to Valentine and a single to Carter for the Expos' only hits. Mike Jorgensen, leading off the ninth inning, stroked a long drive to right that Dave Kingman caught leaping against the wall to erase the Expos' only scoring opportunity.

In picking up the victory, Matlack walked none and struck out four including third baseman Larry Parrish three times.

Johnny Bench and Joe Morgan slammed home runs and the Cincinnati Reds stole five bases Saturday en route to a 13-7 victory rout of the Houston Astros.

The homers were two of 15 hits for the Reds, who made it two in a row over the Astros as Jack Billingham, who pitched six innings, picked up his first victory. The Reds scored five runs in the first inning, routing loser Larry Dierker before he retired a batter.

The Reds' five stolen bases gave them nine in nine attempts in two games against the Astros. The defending World Champions are now 2-0 in the NL West.

In other games, Pittsburgh shaded Philadelphia 5-4 in 11 innings, Chicago edged St. Louis 4-3, 1-0 and Los Angeles at San Francisco was rained out.

A three-base error by Philadelphia outfielder Ollie Brown and a ground single by Mario Mendoza in the 11th inning gave the Pirates a victory over the Phillies in the opener for both clubs.

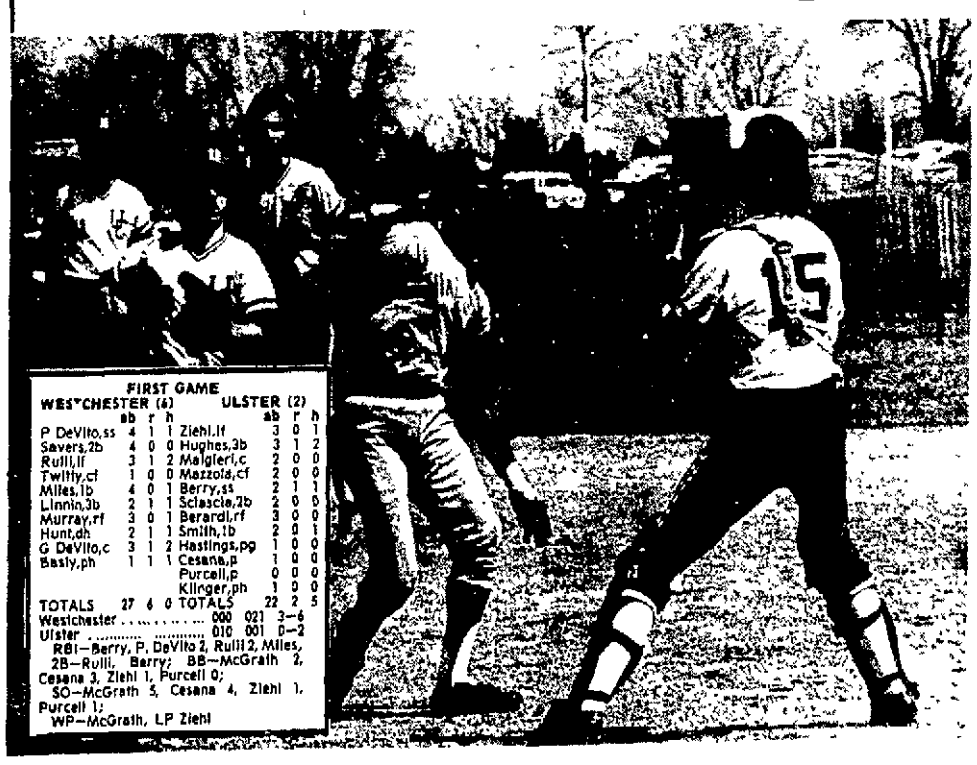

With two out in the 11th, Richie Hebner hit a long fly ball off reliever Tug McGraw which Brown gloved on the run but then dropped. Mendoza, a late inning replacement, then rapped a single through the middle to score the winning run and spoil the Phillies' home opener for 42,147.

But worse than the defeat for the Phils was the loss of their starting catcher Johnny Oates with a shoulder injury. Hurt in a ninth inning home plate collision with burly Dave Parker, Oates will be out for six to eight weeks.

Right-hander Bill Bonham shut off the St. Louis offense on four hits and Jerry Morales drove in two runs in the winning rally as the Cubs squeezed past the Cardinals. Bonham had a no-hitter through 4 1-3 innings.

STONE RIDGE—Westchester County Community College, currently tied for 11th in the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) baseball ratings, made Ulster Community's home opener a sour one Saturday as it swept a doubleheader from the Senators, 6-2, 6-0.

"We played well and I thought we had them in the first game, but they had discipline and maturity and came up with the good plays. They didn't give up much."

Ulster led 1-0 in the opener, a second inning run standing up until the fifth. That run was as a result of a Mario Berry double and steal of home and an error. But the Vikings ripped losing pitcher Fred Ziehl for two in the fifth and one in the sixth and added three in the seventh against Jeff Purcell.

"He is a big-time pitcher," said Vizvary. "He was really humming them in there."

Purcell took the defeat in that game. Westchester's big hit was a long two-run home by Mark Miles.

Floyd Eight Shots Ahead for Masters Runaway

Floyd lost three strokes on two holes where he played conservatively, trying to protect a big lead, then settled down to shoot a two-under-par 70 that left him a runaway eight shots ahead with 18 holes to play.

"One thing you can be sure of tomorrow," he said with the premature grin of a winner. "If I play safe, it's going to be safe. I just hope I don't go getting too defensive."

A five-shot leader at the start of the third round, Floyd made a bogey at one hole where he decided to aim safely for the middle of the green and missed it, and suffered a watery double bogey at another where he did the same thing and pulled the supposed "safe" shot into a pond.

Those mistakes didn't mean a thing, however, when they were stacked up against the awesome power that Floyd displayed on the par-five holes.

He made birdies at all of them—including the two water holes on the back nine that followed his double-bogey—and finished the third round with a 15-under-par total of 201.

Nicklaus, apparently beaten in a bid for a sixth Masters and 17th major title, wasn't exactly conceding, but he hardly sounded confident, either.

"I'm eight shots back, but there's no one between Raymond and myself," said Nicklaus, the defending champion. "If I get off to a good start and Raymond has a mediocre round, I'll have a chance."

For Floyd, who has made a birdie or better on every one of the par-five holes through the first three rounds, the second major championship of a rollercoaster career appears assured.

"I don't think anyone in here would bet against me at this point," he told a group of writers.

No one made a real run at Floyd Saturday and so when disaster almost struck at No. 11 he was able to handle it. The disaster was in the form of an approach shot he aimed for the middle of the green and pulled into the pond on the left, resulting in a double bogey that cut his lead at that point from six to four strokes. Earlier, he had bogeyed the fifth hole with a similar conservative but misplayed shot, so on the 12th tee Floyd decided it was time to quit playing safe.

"I've done so well going for the flag, but the only two times I changed my plans cost me a bogey and double bogey," he said. "Those were the shots I missed."

It was an easy decision to make, particularly since Floyd was virtually unchallenged— and knew it.

"I saw every number go up on every hole," he said. "I'd be lying if I said I didn't."

His courage was tested at the 13th, a 485-yard par-five with a fairway tightly guarded by the creek that winds in front of the green.

There, Floyd pushed his tee shot to the right of the fairway and underneath a tree. He never hesitated, pulled out a wood and went for the green instead of laying up safe and short of the creek—the same creek that Arnold Palmer hit twice on Friday when his hopes of making the 36-hole cut died with a triple-bogey eight.

Floyd's shot cleared the ditch and even though it strayed left of the green and into a bunker, he had no trouble getting it up-and-down for the birdie.

When Floyd flew his second shot onto the green at the 15th, another par-5 of 520 yards with a green fronted by a pond, the tournament was for all practical purposes over.

He two-putted there for another birdie that gave him an amazing total of 11 birdies and one eagle for 13 under par on the 12 par-five holes he played in the first three rounds.

The water on the other holes didn't bother Floyd, either, and when he strode up the 18th fairway to the elevated final green he was accorded the type reception usually reserved for a champion.

The rest of the field was strung out behind Nicklaus, the defending champion and a five-time winner of this, first of the four major professional golf championships around which Nicklaus and many of the other top players build their seasons.

Larry Ziegler, who matched par of 72 in the sunny, mild weather of Saturday's round, was in third place at 210, six under par and a whopping nine strokes behind Floyd.

Charles Coody, the surprise winner here in 1971, was alone in fourth at 211 following a two-under-par 70.

Tom Kite and Ben Crenshaw, who tied for the NCAA championship in 1972 while both were undergraduates at the University of Texas, were next with 212 totals, both matching par 72 Saturday.

Hubert Green and Hale Irwin, the top two money winners on this year's PGA tour and winner of five tournaments between them in 1976, were at 215 with drastically different third round scores. Green played the back nine in 42, losing three strokes to the ditches on 12 and 13, for a 78. Irwin had the day's best round, a 67.

For Floyd, the victory that almost certainly will be his is worth $40,000 in cash but represents far more in terms of personal satisfaction, his career having turned around 180 degrees after he won the PGA championship and two other tour events in 1969.

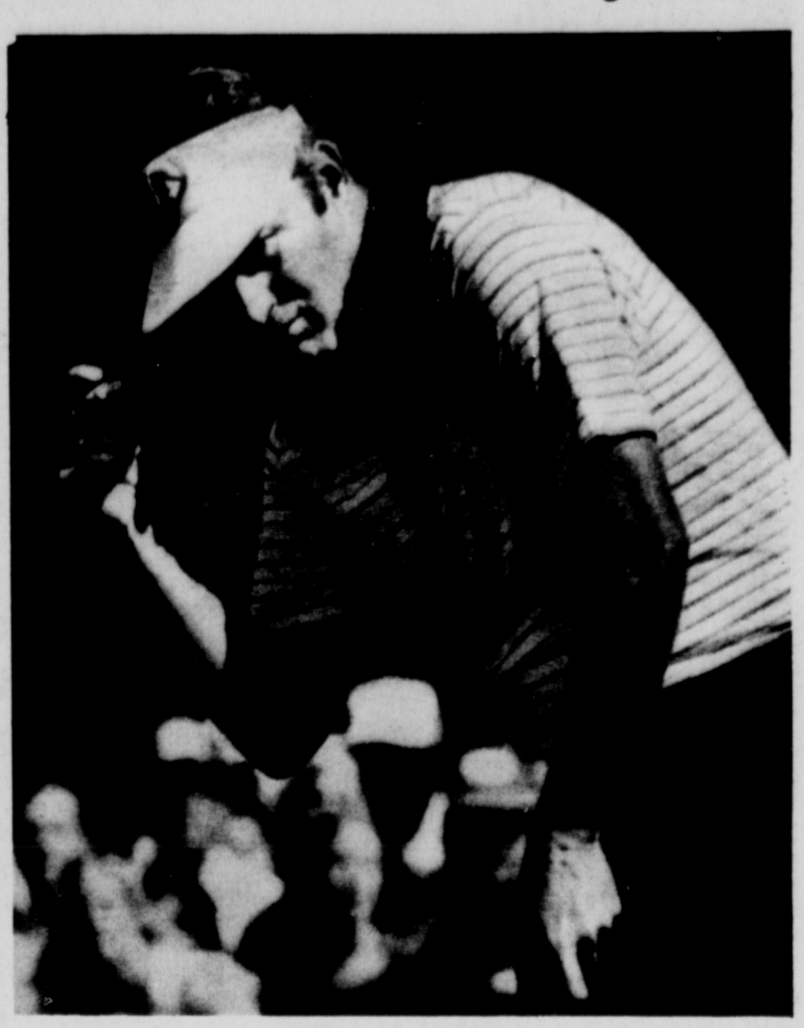

The 33-year-old Floyd went a lean six years until he won again last spring in the Kemper Open, a period which saw him drop clear out of the top 60 money winners while struggling with his swing and his lifestyle.

He solved the first problem when he took care of the second by marrying and now Floyd admits, "I wish that I had the good sense to train when I was younger."

Earlier this year, Floyd took six weeks off the tour while his wife was giving birth to his second baby but had made the cut in seven straight tournaments since coming back and this victory, assuming disaster does not strike, will be the sixth of his 13-year career.

Floyd's 201 total broke by one the Masters record for the first 54 holes set by Nicklaus in 1965 when Nicklaus set the tournament scoring record at 271. That was also the year that Jack won by nine strokes, a margin in jeopardy this year.

Player, a two-time Masters winner, had a 70 Saturday and was at even-par 216, two strokes ahead of Johnny Miller, whose third round was 74, and three in front of Lee Trevino, whose 69 was one of the best scores he ever posted on this Augusta National course, a layout he claims he can't play. Arnold Palmer missed the 36-hole cut.

Ray Floyd keeps rolling.

Messersmith Signs $1.75 Million Pact With Atlanta Braves

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Andy Messersmith, the 30-year old right-hander who won his free agency in a historic baseball decision four months ago, Saturday signed a four-year contract with Atlanta worth $1.75 million and was in uniform Saturday when the Braves met the San Diego Padres.

The only problem related to Messersmith's signing was his free agent status. General Manager Eddie Robinson called Johnny Johnson, the administrator for Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, and the agreement took place when Johnson assured all parties that Messersmith was indeed a free agent.

The problem had arisen because of an incident a week ago with the New York Yankees, who said they had reached an agreement with Osmond only to have Messersmith refuse to sign the contract. The Yankees later withdrew their offer.

Osmond called it a "lifetime contract. It's a three-year contract with renewal clauses every year. Messersmith will play as long as he can pitch."

"He'll never be traded—he'll be a Brave as long as I am," Turner said after the announcement that Messersmith will join Atlanta. "Physically, Andy says he's fine. We have four players that are good friends of Andy's and they are all tickled to death. They said there's not a better player and that was good enough for me."

The "lifetime" reference by Osmond was a strange one in that Messersmith won his key court decision bases on the grounds that a player should not be bound to one team forever.

Turner, who confessed that he became upset when Osmond failed to return his calls in the past, said he decided to take one last pitch. He asked Bristol if he'd like Messersmith and the manager simply replied, "I damned sure would". Turner, who said he made the highest offer of the many teams seeking Messersmith's services, then went after the ace right-hander.

San Diego owner Ray Kroc offered $1.5 two weeks ago and Messersmith turned it down, prompting Kroc to crack, "For my part, he can go wash cars."

Messersmith and left-hander Dave McNally both were declared free agents when arbitrator Peter Seitz ruled baseball's reserve clause was illegal last December. McNally, who started last season with the Montreal Expos, retired last summer, so he was not affected by the decision, but Messersmith a 19-game winner for the Los Angeles Dodgers last season, made himself available to the highest bidder.

The signing of Messersmith came after the Yankees had freed him of any obligation to them. The Yankees announced on March 31 they had reached an agreement with Osmond to sign Messersmith to a four-year, $1.5 million contract, but Messersmith refused to sign the actual contract when it differed from the written agreement.

The Yankees put their case before Kuhn but before the commissioner could act, the Yankees withdrew their offer for Messersmith when he made it clear that he had no intentions of playing for them.

The curly-haired Messeersmith who won 19 games for the Dodgers last season, became a free agent last Dec. 23 when Seitz declared that the reserve clause, as interpreted in the standard player contract, did not bind a player to a team for more than one year. Messersmith played without signing a contract last season.

District Court Judge John W. Oliver upheld Seitz's decision in Kansas City on Feb. 3 and a Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis delivered the knockout punch to the owners March 9 when it again upheld the original decision.

The bidding for Messersmith began last March 9 when the Dodgers officially declared him a free agent.

Besides the Braves, the Pittsburgh Pirates, California Angels, New York Mets, Kansas City Royals, Texas Rangers, Chicago White Sox, San Diego Padres and Los Angeles Dodgers participated heavily in the bidding for Messersmith's services.

At one point during negotiations with the clubs, Osmond accused the owners of collusion because he felt they were not bidding actively enough for his client and threatened suit.

In landing Messersmith, the Braves have obtained one of the leading pitchers in baseball. Twice a 20-game winner, Messersmith last season led National League pitchers in starts (40), complete games (19), shutouts (7) and innings pitched (322 1-3). He also was second in earned run average (2.29) and third in strikeouts (213).

Messersmith, who spent the last three seasons with the Dodgers after five years with the Angels, has a lifetime ERA of 2.65 and a 112-77 record.

However, it was his willingness to test —and beat—baseball's reserve clause issue for which he probably will be best remembered. Seitz's decision shook the very foundation of the game and reamins the central issue in the current squabble between the owners and players over a new basic agreement.

Both sides agree the reserve clause must now be restructured, but they have been unable to reach agreement on a workable system. The hassle forced the owners to close the spring training camps earlier this month and it took an order from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to have them opened March 17.

Messersmith, who was raised in California, probably would not have gone through with his reserve clause test if the Dodgers had agreed to a "no trade" provision in their contract offer last year.

The Dodgers refused to include that provision in the contract, however, and Messersmith decided to go through with his test case. Shortly before Seitz was to make his ruling, the club agreed to grant Messersmith's "no trade" request, but by then he had gone too far to back down.

Yanks Rally, 9-7

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The New York Yankees scored five runs in the ninth inning highlighted by Chris Chambliss' two-run double and Lou Piniella's triple off the left field wall to give the New York Yankees a come-from-behind 9-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday as Don Money's ninth inning grandslam was disallowed.

Money's bases-loaded homer off Yankee reliever Dave Pagan was nullified when first base umpire Jim McKean ruled that time had been called before the pitch was made.

The Brewers led 6-4 when Mickey Rivers led off the ninth by beating out a grounder to shortstop. Tom Murphy came in to replace Jerry Augustine and struck out Roy White but Rivers stole second and then scored on Thurman Munson's infield single.

Chambliss followed with a double down the left field line to score Rivers and Munson and Piniella followed with a long triple off the left-center field wall to score Chambliss with the winning run. Graig Nettles walked to put runners on first and third and Piniella scored on Rick Dempsey's infield single as Nettles moved to third.

Nettles scored the final run of the inning on Willie Randolph's sacrifice fly.

Sparky Lyle, the fourth of six Yankee pitchers, picked up his first victory against no defeats after working just 1-3 inning. Murphy, 0-1, took the loss.

In other American League games, Baltimore stopped Boston 5-1, Oakland knocked off California 6-2 and Detroit downed Cleveland 3-1.

Tony Muser's two-run double capped an eighth inning rally as Baltimore beat Boston. Pinch-hitter Tommy Harper led off the eighth with a single, advanced to second on a wild pitch and scored the tying run on Paul Blair's double. Ken Singleton's single moved Blair to third before Lee May singled to score Blair. Bob Grich reached on a swinging bunt single and Muser's double scored Singleton and May. Brooks Robinson's sacrifice fly brought in Grich.

Willie Horton smashed a two-run second inning homer and veteran Joe Coleman pitched six shutout innings to lead Detroit to a victory over Cleveland before more than 65,000 fans in the American League opener for both teams.

Phil Garner smashed a double and a triple, drove in two runs and scored another to power Oakland to a triumph over California for the defending American League West champions' second straight victory.

In night action, Minnesota was at Texas.

Mets Zip Expos

NEW YORK (UPI) — Felix Millan's fourth inning double scored Bud Harrelson with the game's only run Saturday and Jon Matlack hurled a four-hitter to give the New York Mets a 1-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Matlack was locked in a pitching duel with southpaw Woodie Fryman. Fryman had hurled hitless ball through the first three innings when Harrelson hit a blooper which right fielder Ellis Valentine could not catch and the ball bounced by him for a tripel. Millan then stroked a long fly ball over left fielder Gary Carter's head, scoring Harrelson and pinning the loss on Fryman.

Matlack yielded two singles to Tim Foli, an infield hit to Valentine and a single to Carter for the Expos' only hits. Mike Jorgensen, leading off the ninth inning, stroked a long drive to right that Dave Kingman caught leaping against the wall to erase the Expos' only scoring opportunity.

In picking up the victory, Matlack walked none and struck out four including third baseman Larry Parrish three times.

Johnny Bench and Joe Morgan slammed home runs and the Cincinnati Reds stole five bases Saturday en route to a 13-7 victory rout of the Houston Astros.

The homers were two of 15 hits for the Reds, who made it two in a row over the Astros as Jack Billingham, who pitched six innings, picked up his first victory. The Reds scored five runs in the first inning, routing loser Larry Dierker before he retired a batter.

The Reds' five stolen bases gave them nine in nine attempts in two games against the Astros. The defending World Champions are now 2-0 in the NL West.

In other games, Pittsburgh shaded Philadelphia 5-4 in 11 innings, Chicago edged St. Louis 4-3, 1-0 and Los Angeles at San Francisco was rained out.

A three-base error by Philadelphia outfielder Ollie Brown and a ground single by Mario Mendoza in the 11th inning gave the Pirates a victory over the Phillies in the opener for both clubs.

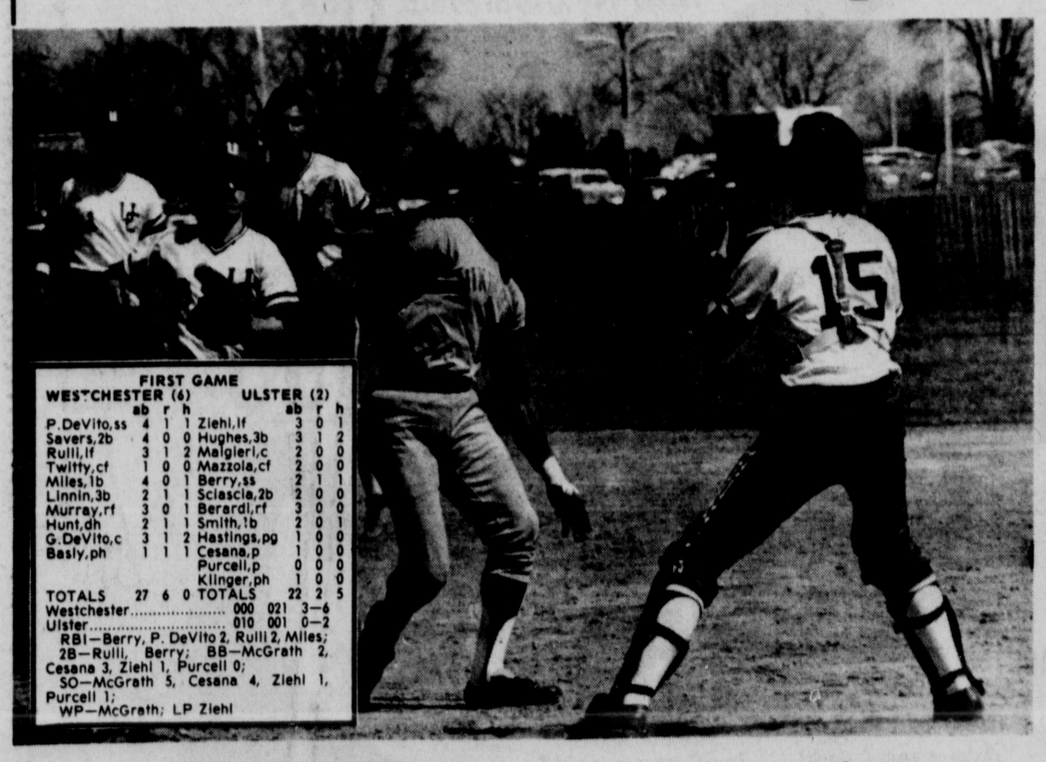

With two out in the 11th, Richie Hebner hit a long fly ball off reliever Tug McGraw which Brown gloved on the run but then dropped. Mendoza, a late inning replacement, then rapped a single through the middle to score the winning run and spoil the Phillies' home opener for 42,147.

But worse than the defeat for the Phils was the loss of their starting catcher Johnny Oates with a shoulder injury. Hurt in a ninth inning home plate collision with burly Dave Parker, Oates will be out for six to eight weeks.

Right-hander Bill Bonham shut off the St. Louis offense on four hits and Jerry Morales drove in two runs in the winning rally as the Cubs squeezed past the Cardinals. Bonham had a no-hitter through 4 1-3 innings.

STONE RIDGE—Westchester County Community College, currently tied for 11th in the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) baseball ratings, made Ulster Community's home opener a sour one Saturday as it swept a doubleheader from the Senators, 6-2, 6-0.

"We played well and I thought we had them in the first game, but they had discipline and maturity and came up with the good plays. They didn't give up much."

Ulster led 1-0 in the opener, a second inning run standing up until the fifth. That run was as a result of a Mario Berry double and steal of home and an error. But the Vikings ripped losing pitcher Fred Ziehl for two in the fifth and one in the sixth and added three in the seventh against Jeff Purcell.

"He is a big-time pitcher," said Vizvary. "He was really humming them in there."

Purcell took the defeat in that game. Westchester's big hit was a long two-run home by Mark Miles.

Hardwick's Search Ends

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — Billy Hardwick's seven-year search for another major bowling title ended when the Louisville, Ky. native captured the $10,000 first prize Saturday in the $80,000 Monro-Matic Open Bowling Tournament at Imperial Lanes, defeating Ernie Schlegel 236-206 in the championship match.

For Hardwick, it was the 17th Professional Bowlers Association crown of his career, but his first major title since winning six scheduled events, the EPAA All-Star and Bowler of the Year honors in 1969.

Though it had been a long time between titles for Hardwick, the thrill hadn't really hit him.

"It hasn't really dawned on me yet," a happy and composed Hardwick said afterwards.

He also was composed when he needed to be. Carrying a 19-pin lead over Schlegel through eight frames, he failed to pick up the 2-5 spare in the ninth, giving Schlegel new hope.

"I didn't want to chop it (leave a pin)," Hardwick said of his shot. "But it never broke. But I knew what I needed in the 10th frame."

What he needed, and what he got, were three strikes. That put the pressure on Schlegel, now needing two strikes and a nine-count in the 10th to win. Instead, he left the seven-pin on his first shot, a solid pocket hit, then failed to convert.

The first game saw Gary Cunningham, Baldwinsville, N.Y., down Nelson Burton Jr., 196-192. Then Cunningham lost to Butch Soper, Huntington Beach, Calif., 248-173.

Ulster Netmen Score

DELHI — Ulster County Community College's varsity tennis team stopped Delhi Tech, 6-3, in the 1976 opener here Saturday to make for a successful debut for UCCC's new coach Paul Donadio.

John Farrell, the former Coleman High ace, gave the Senators the quick lead by topping Andy Welsh, 6-3, 6-4. After Delhi had moved in fromt 2-1 on a 6-0, 6-7, 6-2 win by Bill Bartlett over Andy Stoll and a 7-6, 6-4 victory by Mike Levy over Duane Jones, Ulster took control.

John Ivankovic tied the score by tripping Scott Danziger, 6-7, 6-3, 7-5. Ken DelRosario then defeated Dale Stoubigel, 6-2, 6-7, 6-2 and Vin Giovenco upended Charlie Lawrence, 6-2, 6-4.

In doubles, Farrell and Jones beat Welsh and Levy, 6-2, 6-3; Stoll and Del Rosario beat Bartlett and Danziger, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2; and Delhi's Stoubigel and Strwn topped Ivankovic and Giovenco, 6-3, 6-0.

Frazier, Foreman At Stadium

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Joe Frazier-George Foreman heavyweight fight will be held at Yankee Stadium on June 15, marking the first fight there in 17 years, the UPI learned Saturday.

Frazier and Foreman signed contracts last month for the 12-round fight which is being promoted by Caesar's Palace of Las Vegas and produced by Jerry Perenchio of Los Angeles but no site or date had been determined at that time.

The last fight to be held at Yankee Stadium before it was refurbished at a cost variously estimated at between $60 and $100 million took place on June 26, 1959 when Ingemar Johannson won the world heavyweight title by knocking out Floyd Patterson.

This will be the second meeting between Foreman and Frazier, their first one resulting in Foreman winning the heavyweight title from Frazier by kayoing him in two rounds at Kingston, Jamaica, in January of 1973.

For this second meeting, Foreman and Frazier each will receive $1 million plus 35 per cent of the box office receipts over $4,250,000.

Seats will be scaled from $200 down to $2 general admission, but general admission tickets only will be able to be purchased by means of a $2 bill with a limit of two to a customer.

"I'm very excited about a fight being held in Yankee Stadium again after all these years and about our two dollar bill concept," said Perenchio. "All the banks in the country are coming out with a new issue of two dollar bills this coming Tuesday in conjunction with the Bicentennial celebration, so there won't be any difficulty in obtaining the bills."

Perenchio said he expects a sellout, which would mean more than 50,000 tickets would be sold, and a gross gate of more than $3 million.

"It will be an 'all-weather' fight," said Perenchio. "By that, I mean it will go on unless there's a typhoon."

The fight will be carried over closed circuit television throughout the United States and outside it as well as in Europe, the Far East, South America, Mexico and Australia.

No Decision On Toronto

TORONTO (UPI) — Baseball fans in the Queen City will have to wait another week to 10 days before they know which league will be based there.

Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey Saturday said Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn told him a decision on an expansion team would be delayed again. Godfrey said the delay was at the request of the American League, which wants to see if it can find some way of dealing with the Washington, D.C. situation.

Godfrey suggested the possible solution would be to have the AL's Baltimore Orioles play some of their games in Washington's Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

"I guess the rationale is that Baltimore would rather lose some of its home games than have a National League team 30 miles from the city," he said. "With that arrangement both teams would struggle."

The city chairman said Commissioner Kuhn and AL President Lee McPhail had assured him that Toronto would have a baseball team in 1977.

Hardwick's Search Ends

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — Billy Hardwick's seven-year search for another major bowling title ended when the Louisville, Ky. native captured the $10,000 first prize Saturday in the $80,000 Monro-Matic Open Bowling Tournament at Imperial Lanes, defeating Ernie Schlegel 236-206 in the championship match.

For Hardwick, it was the 17th Professional Bowlers Association crown of his career, but his first major title since winning six scheduled events, the EPAA All-Star and Bowler of the Year honors in 1969.

Though it had been a long time between titles for Hardwick, the thrill hadn't really hit him.

"It hasn't really dawned on me yet," a happy and composed Hardwick said afterwards.

He also was composed when he needed to be. Carrying a 19-pin lead over Schlegel through eight frames, he failed to pick up the 2-5 spare in the ninth, giving Schlegel new hope.

"I didn't want to chop it (leave a pin)," Hardwick said of his shot. "But it never broke. But I knew what I needed in the 10th frame."

What he needed, and what he got, were three strikes. That put the pressure on Schlegel, now needing two strikes and a nine-count in the 10th to win. Instead, he left the seven-pin on his first shot, a solid pocket hit, then failed to convert.

The first game saw Gary Cunningham, Baldwinsville, N.Y., down Nelson Burton Jr., 196-192. Then Cunningham lost to Butch Soper, Huntington Beach, Calif., 248-173.

Ulster Netmen Score

DELHI — Ulster County Community College's varsity tennis team stopped Delhi Tech, 6-3, in the 1976 opener here Saturday to make for a successful debut for UCCC's new coach Paul Donadio.

John Farrell, the former Coleman High ace, gave the Senators the quick lead by topping Andy Welsh, 6-3, 6-4. After Delhi had moved in fromt 2-1 on a 6-0, 6-7, 6-2 win by Bill Bartlett over Andy Stoll and a 7-6, 6-4 victory by Mike Levy over Duane Jones, Ulster took control.

John Ivankovic tied the score by tripping Scott Danziger, 6-7, 6-3, 7-5. Ken DelRosario then defeated Dale Stoubigel, 6-2, 6-7, 6-2 and Vin Giovenco upended Charlie Lawrence, 6-2, 6-4.

In doubles, Farrell and Jones beat Welsh and Levy, 6-2, 6-3; Stoll and Del Rosario beat Bartlett and Danziger, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2; and Delhi's Stoubigel and Strwn topped Ivankovic and Giovenco, 6-3, 6-0.

Frazier, Foreman At Stadium

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Joe Frazier-George Foreman heavyweight fight will be held at Yankee Stadium on June 15, marking the first fight there in 17 years, the UPI learned Saturday.

Frazier and Foreman signed contracts last month for the 12-round fight which is being promoted by Caesar's Palace of Las Vegas and produced by Jerry Perenchio of Los Angeles but no site or date had been determined at that time.

The last fight to be held at Yankee Stadium before it was refurbished at a cost variously estimated at between $60 and $100 million took place on June 26, 1959 when Ingemar Johannson won the world heavyweight title by knocking out Floyd Patterson.

This will be the second meeting between Foreman and Frazier, their first one resulting in Foreman winning the heavyweight title from Frazier by kayoing him in two rounds at Kingston, Jamaica, in January of 1973.

For this second meeting, Foreman and Frazier each will receive $1 million plus 35 per cent of the box office receipts over $4,250,000.

Seats will be scaled from $200 down to $2 general admission, but general admission tickets only will be able to be purchased by means of a $2 bill with a limit of two to a customer.

"I'm very excited about a fight being held in Yankee Stadium again after all these years and about our two dollar bill concept," said Perenchio. "All the banks in the country are coming out with a new issue of two dollar bills this coming Tuesday in conjunction with the Bicentennial celebration, so there won't be any difficulty in obtaining the bills."

Perenchio said he expects a sellout, which would mean more than 50,000 tickets would be sold, and a gross gate of more than $3 million.

"It will be an 'all-weather' fight," said Perenchio. "By that, I mean it will go on unless there's a typhoon."

The fight will be carried over closed circuit television throughout the United States and outside it as well as in Europe, the Far East, South America, Mexico and Australia.

No Decision On Toronto

TORONTO (UPI) — Baseball fans in the Queen City will have to wait another week to 10 days before they know which league will be based there.

Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey Saturday said Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn told him a decision on an expansion team would be delayed again. Godfrey said the delay was at the request of the American League, which wants to see if it can find some way of dealing with the Washington, D.C. situation.

Godfrey suggested the possible solution would be to have the AL's Baltimore Orioles play some of their games in Washington's Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

"I guess the rationale is that Baltimore would rather lose some of its home games than have a National League team 30 miles from the city," he said. "With that arrangement both teams would struggle."

The city chairman said Commissioner Kuhn and AL President Lee McPhail had assured him that Toronto would have a baseball team in 1977.

If Ray Floyd wins the Masters today amid the dogwoods of the Augusta National Club in Augusta, Ga , it will be a triumph of man's skills and patience over human frailties

When Floyd won the 1969 National PGA title, he was hailed as one of the brightest prospects on the pro tour and one of its longest hitters But wine, women and song and too few birdies sent Floyd into a precipitous decline from which only now he seems to be slowly emerging

A Floyd victory today might not set too well with the crusty establishment at the Augusta National, the most auster in of all golfdom with the possible exception of the Royal and Ancient at St. Andrews. But it would be a popular development with the American sports public which admires the man who can rise from his own ashes to redemption.

He is off the booze now, married and with a couple of kids. At 33, he has a chance to restructure his career We hope he makes it.

Count us amoung the few remaining diehards who do not consider The Masters as the greatest of all golf tournaments We rate the Big Four in this order U S Open, British Open, The Masters and National PGA

The Masters, with its international field (by invitational) is the snob tournament in the world It is beautifully orchestrated, reeks with tradition and gets the best press It was started by the legendary Bobby Jones, the first authentic folk hero in American golf It is played in a magnificent setting of dogwoods and azaleas hard by the inner city of ante-bellum Augusta

Both the Masters and city of Augusta have worked diligently to recoup an image that once suffered badly under the ironhand of Cliff Roberts, the octogenerian Wall Street tycoon who has been director of the Masters since its inception.

You didn't see it on television or read about it too much in the papers, but in its early stages the Masters represented monumental traffic jams and severe segregation of ticket holders. The clubhouse, except for the elite was sancrosanct and forbidden. Woe to the ticket holder who strayed beyond the limits his ticket entitled him to.

Not even the press was immune to the rigid regulations governing coverage of the tournament One day, one of the most respected sports writers in the country—Milton Richman, the United Press International Sports Editor whose column appears regularly in The Freeman—figured he had enough of the Augusta tyranny

Uncle Miltie sat down and wrote a memorable column the gist of which was that the Masters as then operated by Cliff Roberts was the only police state in sports The column had nationwide repercussions Richman was banished from further coverage, but the Masters was never the same

The crowds are now strictly limited to 25,000 and the monumental traffic jams are missing. There are better housing and eating facilities in and around Augusta. They have even forgiven Jack Whitaker, one of the nation's finest sportcasters, for some uncharitable remarks he made about the arrangments at the Masters.

You can't really count yourself as a golf bug if you haven't seen the Masters at least once in your lifetime. It won't be easy to get tickets, but the trouble is worth it.

As you approach Augusta from the north you'll drive past all the tourist trademarks of the south pecans, fireworks, fast food chains, Cannon towels, chenille bedspreads It's an early spring wonderland Augusta is mighty expensive, but there s no denying the electricity that envelops you as you walk down Magnolia Lane toward the first tee No golf course in the world excites the first time fan like the Masters

To the sportswriter making his first trip to the Masters the "press accommodations" will be a bit of a shock. The "press room" is housed in a Quonset hut of World II vintage just to the right of the first tee

Once you get past the first and second echelons of Pinkertons, if you have the right credentials, you move into the inner sanctum of the shed where there are hundreds of typewriters. Adjacent is the press lounge, where you can gorge yourself with freebie sandwiches and cokes. No hard stuff at Augusta for the working press.

Sabres Face Isles

But you couldn't really blame the Sabres for looking back a little at an exciting, exhausting playoff win over the Blues in a series that saw two of three games go into sudden-death overtime

"I don't think we'll be forgetting St Louis for a while, at least not until Sunday," said Sabres' Captain Jim Schoenfeld

"If we had to play St Louis again, we might feel our aches and pains and how tired we are But we have a new series coming up and this should help us forget how tired we are," said the big, red headed defenseman

In the other NHL quarter final playoff series it will be Boston v s Los Angeles, Philadelphia against Toronto, and Chicago meeting Montreal

Buffalo had lots of aches and pains to shake off after the gruelling series with the Blues

Schoenfeld was nursing a sore, swollen left ankle, Danny Gare had a tender left elbow, Rick Martin had a cut on his right elbow, Rene Robert had sore ribs, Lee Fogolin had a bruised right thigh and Don Luce—who scored the deciding overtime goal against St Louis in Friday night's 2-1 victory— was nursing a bruised left knee

Even so, Buffalo winger Craig Ramsay said the Sabres should be ready for the opener against the Islanders, which will to be televised nationally in the NHL's newly improvised network as the initial 'Game of the Week "

"We could be a little bit too tired for it being so early in the playoffs," he said "But this is not like the drag of the regular season We have a new series to look forward to now and I think we can get back up '

While the Sabres were trying not to look over their shoulders, Islander goaltender Glenn Resch was hoping his squad could be a little more relaxed

"We have to be more relaxed in the next series," he said after New York's two-game elimination of Vancouver "This was the series that worried us "

"Buffalo was close before and can taste it," Resch said "But I want it so bad Now the Cup is my only goal in hockey "

The Sabres have the home ice advantage in the best of seven series, picking up four more points in the regular season than the Islanders But New York proved this season that it could win in Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium

While they had never beaten the Sabres before this season, the Islanders won the last two regular season games with Buffalo—and both were played on the Sabres' ice

Dancing Feet

Francis Resigns

NEW YORK (UPI) — Emile Francis has resigned as vice president of the New York Rangers and has terminated his 16 year association with the team, it was announced Saturday by William Jennings president of the National Hockey League club

'After working with Emile Francis all these years since 1960 this is a very sad announcement for me to make, Jennings said "However, Emile tells me he prefers to be where the action is as a general manager In any event, myself and everyone at Madison Square Garden wish him well "

More than two years remained on Francis' employment contract with the Rangers as a principal executive However, Francis had the option to terminate the contract at any time when he was not general manager

Francis served as general manager of the Rangers since Oct 1 1964 until being replaced by John Ferguson last Jan 6 He also coached the club on three separate occasions the last stint ending with the completion of the 1974 75 season

Although he built a team that qualified for the playoffs nine consecutive years, Francis failed in his principal goal to lead the Rangers to the Stanley Cup This season, when a series of deals shook up the club, the Rangers finished last in the Patrick Division and failed to qualify for the playoffs

"The news behind the fashion news this spring is the vest. I've always liked a vest. Makes you look extra well-dressed. Trim. Slim. I especially like this vested Suraline suit. It's got the steep diagonal weave and sharp, clear cut lines of gabardine. Great for making some fashion news yourself this spring."

'The Battle' Ends

[illegible] John Cappelletti was helping Penn State battle Pitt, Syracuse and Navy, his little brother, Joey, was battling leukemia So when the outstanding running back received the Heisman Trophy in 1973, he proudly told a surprised New York audience that Joey deserved the award at least as much as he did. The crowd wept openly along with John. On Thursday, Joey died at the family home in the Philadelphia suburb of Upper Darby at the age of 14, in a room filled with football trophies won by his brother. NFL Draft Was Like Family Affair

NEW YORK (UPI) — The final stage of the National Football League's annual college player draft was like a family affair—long winded and loaded with relatives

The longest draft since the old AFL and the NFL merged for a common draft ended at 8 14 p m EST Friday night, 24 hours, 13 minutes after it had begun It ended on the 17th round when the World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers selected wide receiver Kelvin Kirk of Dayton (a concession to Coach Chuck Noll's alma mater) as the 487th and final player—five teams forfeited picks as penalties for signing violations

The highlight of the second day's drafting, which included the final 10 rounds, was the number of pro football relations taken

After the expansion Tampa Bay Buccaneers Thursday became only the fifth team in NFL history to draft brothers in the same year, the New York Jets did them one better, drafting twins back to back

Tampa Bay made Oklahoma defensive tackle Leroy Selmon the No 1 pick and then took Dewey Selmon a round later But Lou Holtz, the Jets' new coach from North Carolina State, leaned back to his college team on round 12 for two unique picks

Holtz first used the Jets' regular choice to take quarterback Dave Buckey and then dealt a later pick to Philadelphia and grabbed off his twin, wide receiver Don Buckey The twins are the first taken in the same draft since Marlin and Mike McKeever of Southern California were picked by Los Angeles in 1961

"I could talk for days about Dave and Don Buckey, ' Holtz said "I think the only reason they were left so long was because there was an understanding that they were interested in playing in the Canadian League They're both outstanding athletes — they're not big, they're not strong but they just put the ball in the end zone. They're winners

"Over in Japan, they played against a lot of guys who were picked number one. Dave was selected outstanding offensive player and Don caught seven passes

"Sure I'm a little prejudiced but I'm also sure they can play in the NFL It was just a matter of getting two choices together so we could grab them both The boys realized they might have to split up and accepted it, but I think they ll both be happy with this arrangement"

Among the other selections Friday were Ohio State defensive back Craig Cassady, whose father, Howard, won the Heisman Trophy and later starred with Detroit He was taken by New Orleans on the eighth round and Brigham Young center Orrin Olsen the younger brother of Los Angeles star Merlin, went to Kansas City on the same round

On the 14th round Oakland took Fresno State's Calvin Young the brother of Philadelphia's All Pro tight end, Charles Young, as a running back

There were also the usual offbeat picks of track stars and basketball players, two of them by Washington's George Allen

Allen picked Michigan forward Wayman Britt on the 13th round and then selected Indiana guard Quinn Buckner on the next round both as defensive backs The pair faced each other in the NCAA finals last month, won by Indiana

Buckner, however, still has a year of football eligibility and there could be a question on whether Allen's pick is legal Allen, however, says he has found a loophole in the NFL constitution which enables him to pick Buckner even though he has eligibility left

Buckner, however, apparently is interested in a pro basketball career He is appearing in the Aloha Classic in Hawaii this week and another All Star game in Philadelphia next week and also will attempt to make the Olympic team

Seattle took Larry Shipp, the NCAA hurdles champion from Louisiana State, on the eighth round as a wide receiver Shipp had a 13 9 clocking in the high hurdles in the NCAA championships at Provo, Utah, last year

When it was over, the selections included 258 offensive players, 208 defensive and 21 specialists Defensive backs were the most in demand, with 83 being selected Nebraska and Ohio State each had 11 players picked, Colorado and Texas A&M 10 each and Florida, Grambling and UCLA eight each

The Big Ten Conference had the most players taken—51—followed by the Big Eight (41), Southeastern (36), Pac-8 (34), Southwestern (33) and Western Athletic (26)

"My son, the Paddock owner."

"When we were married six years ago we decided to hold off on having a family for a while. We wanted to get to know each other and have a few things we always wanted. We bought our own home. A sports car. A Paddock Pool.

Over the last six years we've enjoyed our Paddock with our friends and neighbors and family. The pool is as good today as when we bought it. But the important thing is, Richard (that's our son) will really enjoy learning how to swim while he's still young. And the fun he'll have with his friends at home.

You know, some day all that we have will be his anyhow. The house. The pool. And before you know it he'll be saying, 'My son, the Paddock owner.' "

Hutchins Surveys New Pond on No. 5 Hole

Tim Cole: Sawyers' Most Valuable Asset

SAUGERTIES — Talk about Saugerties High School's baseball team and the conversation has to come around to Tim Cole. If Cole is healthy all season, the Sawyers must be considered a threat to win the Dutchess County Scholastic League championship. He's that good.

"Our success this season really depends on how strong the league is," says Saugerties coach Tony Vizzie. "If it's the kind of league where everybody knocks everybody else off we'll be in there."

Cole is Vizzie's most valuable asset. Still only a junior, the fireballing lefthander is as good if not better than any pitcher in the Hudson Valley. He's proven that not only in DCSL competition, but in American Legion and Hudson Valley Rookie League outings.

Last year Cole had a 4-2 record with a 0.91 ERA in DCSL GAMES. The Sawyers finished in fourth place with a 10-8 record, three games behind champion Kingston. Cole was also the club's leading hitter.

Catching for the quartet will be the solid Karl Lezette, who Vizzie hopes, will be 100 percent after suffering a broken finger last year.

Around the infield it's Joe Maines at first base, Steve Martin at second, Jay Harris at shortstop and either LaVigne, George Augustine or Mark Fiscaletti at third. Martin is a three-year veteran and Harris earned an honorable mention spot on the Freeman All-Star team a year ago.

"I think the strength of the team will be up the middle . . . our catching, shortstop, second base, center field and of course pitching when Cole is in there," says Vizzie.

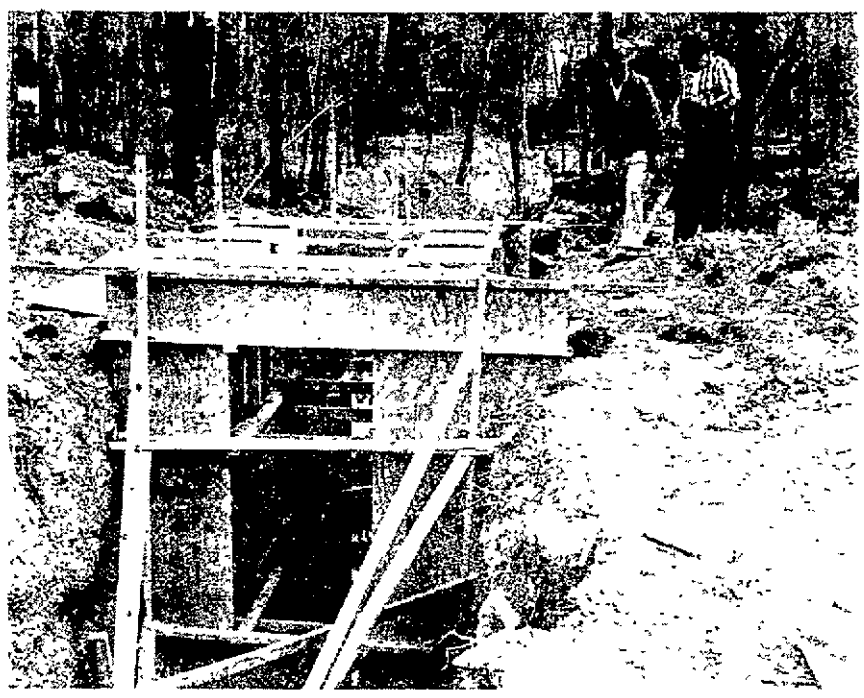

The Sawyer coach sees Cole, Harris, Martin and Lezette providing the offensive punch, although he admits the club doesn't have much power.

Saugerties figures to be in quite a few low scoring games and if the pitching holds up, it should be victorious in most of them.

New Construction on No. 4 Hole.

Alter Two Key Holes At Woodstock Golf Club

WOODSTOCK — The Woodstock Country Club will feature extensive alterations on two key holes — the fourth and fifth — when the 1976 men's tournament schedule opens with the 36-hole Allen Waterous Memorial on Saturday and Sunday, May 8-9.

The pond fronting on the demanding par-3 third hole has been enlarged to insure a greater water supply. The earth gouged from the pond is being dumped behind the No 3 green, with long range plans calling for the shifting of the green to the tree line above the Sawkill Creek.

A permanent pool has been dug out in front of the No 5 green, considerably tightening the par-5 for the hole. The ditch . which bisects the No. 2 fairway and continues along the fifth fairway has been widened and cleaned out.

The board of governors authorized the drilling of a new well and extending the depth of the other one on the 6th tee and the other between the third and fourth fairways The wells insure the Woodstock club an independent supply of water.

Major events of the men's calendar for 1976 also include a 36-hole Member-Member on June 5-6: the President's Cup on July 10-11. The club Seniors is scheduled on June 25.

The annual Member-Guest will be played on Aug. 29 and a new Three-Man tournament is set for Sept. 11. A Beat the Pos is slated Sept. 18, when several area pros join Jim Hutchins against the club membership.

Woodstock hosts the first round of the Ulster County Amateur on Saturday, June 19, and the Ulster County Seniors on Sept. 12.

Frisbee Fun

IRVINE, Calif. (UPI) — About 100 of the nation's top Frisbee flippers will compete this weekend in the Western National Frisbee Golf Championships at UC Irvine.

The "golf" event, one of 15 scheduled this year by the International Frisbee Association, leads to the over-all world championships in August.

Frease Chosen

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Don Frease, a football graduate assistant at Stanford the past two years, has been named to coach the Cardinal junior varsity team.

Derby Festival Bigger

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — This normally rather formal Ohio River town with a southern accent kicks up its heels 10 days each year in springtime during the annual Kentucky Derby Festival.

This year the festival is planned to be bigger and more comprehensive than ever and anyone who tried to follow or participate in all of the events —from hot-air balloon contests to riverfront steamboat races— would be a basket case by Derby post-time.

The 1976 Parade of Pegasus, named after the winged horse of Greek mythology, appropriately for the Bicentennial Year, salutes "The American Dream" on April 29. The parade will have more than 25 patriotic floats of great moments in American history, 40 bands from across the nation, a 1,776-piece band of southern Indiana high school musicians, the Kentucky Derby Queen, police motorcycle teams, flag bearers and just about anyone else in a 200-mile radius with a costume.

The parade is expected to take two hours passing the reviewing stand before prominent guests, state and city officials.

The annual steamboat race, with three sternwheelers participating this year, will be on the city's riverfront Wednesday April 28. The host Belle of Louisville has been challenged by Greene Lines Delta Queen out of Cincinnati, and the smaller Julia Belle Swain, whose home port is Peoria, Ill.

The race this year will be on the straightaway, with none of the turns that have brought accusations of local chicanery in past years.

The 1976 Great Balloon Race, featuring 25 huge, brightly colored hot-air balloons, will be held Saturday, April 24. Sixteen of the giant balloons now are owned locally.

Following the lead "hare" balloon, the "hound" contenders will try to land closest to the leader, usually in a far-off farm field. Contenders include publisher Malcolm Forbes, world champion aeronaut Dave Schaeffer, national champion Dave Medema and Chuck Ehrler of Louisville, the 1974 national champion.

There's also a two-day Kentucky Derby Festival of Cycling, a pedalathon on tricycles for the college set and the Derby-Festival Mini-Marathon, which attracts young Louisville Mayor Harvey I. Sloane among 650 other harriers.

Then there are numerous balls, an air show, a special tennis tournament featuring actress Elke Sommer and television stars Ross Martin, MacDonald Carey and Peter Graves, and the coronation of the Derby Queen.

Satellite features include the annual banquet meeting of the Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels, presentation of the Festival's Silver Horseshoe award to horseman and industrialist C. V. Whitney, and hundreds of private parties.

Oh, yes—and the 102nd running of the Kentucky Derby will be Saturday, May 1 at Churchill Downs.

Tim Cole: Sawyers' Most Valuable Asset

SAUGERTIES — Talk about Saugerties High School's baseball team and the conversation has to come around to Tim Cole. If Cole is healthy all season, the Sawyers must be considered a threat to win the Dutchess County Scholastic League championship. He's that good.

"Our success this season really depends on how strong the league is," says Saugerties coach Tony Vizzie. "If it's the kind of league where everybody knocks everybody else off we'll be in there."

Cole is Vizzie's most valuable asset. Still only a junior, the fireballing lefthander is as good if not better than any pitcher in the Hudson Valley. He's proven that not only in DCSL competition, but in American Legion and Hudson Valley Rookie League outings.

Last year Cole had a 4-2 record with a 0.91 ERA in DCSL GAMES. The Sawyers finished in fourth place with a 10-8 record, three games behind champion Kingston. Cole was also the club's leading hitter.

Catching for the quartet will be the solid Karl Lezette, who Vizzie hopes, will be 100 percent after suffering a broken finger last year.

Around the infield it's Joe Maines at first base, Steve Martin at second, Jay Harris at shortstop and either LaVigne, George Augustine or Mark Fiscaletti at third. Martin is a three-year veteran and Harris earned an honorable mention spot on the Freeman All-Star team a year ago.

"I think the strength of the team will be up the middle . . . our catching, shortstop, second base, center field and of course pitching when Cole is in there," says Vizzie.

The Sawyer coach sees Cole, Harris, Martin and Lezette providing the offensive punch, although he admits the club doesn't have much power.

Saugerties figures to be in quite a few low scoring games and if the pitching holds up, it should be victorious in most of them.

Alter Two Key Holes At Woodstock Golf Club

WOODSTOCK — The Woodstock Country Club will feature extensive alterations on two key holes — the fourth and fifth — when the 1976 men's tournament schedule opens with the 36-hole Allen Waterous Memorial on Saturday and Sunday, May 8-9.

The pond fronting on the demanding par-3 third hole has been enlarged to insure a greater water supply. The earth gouged from the pond is being dumped behind the No. 3 green, with long range plans calling for the shifting of the green to the tree line above the Sawkill Creek.

A permanent pool has been dug out in front of the No. 5 green, considerably tightening the par-5 for the hole. The ditch . which bisects the No. 2 fairway and continues along the fifth fairway has been widened and cleaned out.

The board of governors authorized the drilling of a new well and extending the depth of the other one on the 6th tee and the other between the third and fourth fairways. The wells insure the Woodstock club an independent supply of water.

Major events of the men's calendar for 1976 also include a 36-hole Member-Member on June 5-6; the President's Cup on July 10-11. The club Seniors is scheduled on June 25.

The annual Member-Guest will be played on Aug. 29 and a new Three-Man tournament is set for Sept. 11. A Beat the Pos is slated Sept. 18, when several area pros join Jim Hutchins against the club membership.

Woodstock hosts the first round of the Ulster County Amateur on Saturday, June 19, and the Ulster County Seniors on Sept. 12.

Frisbee Fun

IRVINE, Calif. (UPI) — About 100 of the nation's top Frisbee flippers will compete this weekend in the Western National Frisbee Golf Championships at UC Irvine.

The "golf" event, one of 15 scheduled this year by the International Frisbee Association, leads to the over-all world championships in August.

Frease Chosen

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Don Frease, a football graduate assistant at Stanford the past two years, has been named to coach the Cardinal junior varsity team.

Derby Festival Bigger

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — This normally rather formal Ohio River town with a southern accent kicks up its heels 10 days each year in springtime during the annual Kentucky Derby Festival.

This year the festival is planned to be bigger and more comprehensive than ever and anyone who tried to follow or participate in all of the events —from hot-air balloon contests to riverfront steamboat races— would be a basket case by Derby post-time.

The 1976 Parade of Pegasus, named after the winged horse of Greek mythology, appropriately for the Bicentennial Year, salutes "The American Dream" on April 29. The parade will have more than 25 patriotic floats of great moments in American history, 40 bands from across the nation, a 1,776-piece band of southern Indiana high school musicians, the Kentucky Derby Queen, police motorcycle teams, flag bearers and just about anyone else in a 200-mile radius with a costume.

The parade is expected to take two hours passing the reviewing stand before prominent guests, state and city officials.

The annual steamboat race, with three sternwheelers participating this year, will be on the city's riverfront Wednesday April 28. The host Belle of Louisville has been challenged by Greene Lines Delta Queen out of Cincinnati, and the smaller Julia Belle Swain, whose home port is Peoria, Ill.

The race this year will be on the straightaway, with none of the turns that have brought accusations of local chicanery in past years.

The 1976 Great Balloon Race, featuring 25 huge, brightly colored hot-air balloons, will be held Saturday, April 24. Sixteen of the giant balloons now are owned locally.

Following the lead "hare" balloon, the "hound" contenders will try to land closest to the leader, usually in a far-off farm field. Contenders include publisher Malcolm Forbes, world champion aeronaut Dave Schaeffer, national champion Dave Medema and Chuck Ehrler of Louisville, the 1974 national champion.

There's also a two-day Kentucky Derby Festival of Cycling, a pedalathon on tricycles for the college set and the Derby-Festival Mini-Marathon, which attracts young Louisville Mayor Harvey I. Sloane among 650 other harriers.

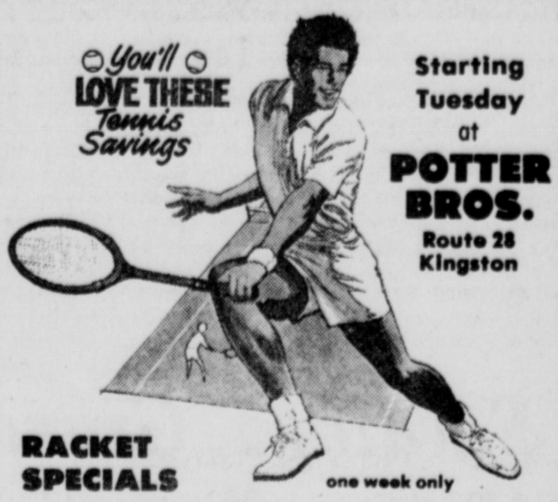

Then there are numerous balls, an air show, a special tennis tournament featuring actress Elke Sommer and television stars Ross Martin, MacDonald Carey and Peter Graves, and the coronation of the Derby Queen.

Satellite features include the annual banquet meeting of the Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels, presentation of the Festival's Silver Horseshoe award to horseman and industrialist C. V. Whitney, and hundreds of private parties.

Oh, yes—and the 102nd running of the Kentucky Derby will be Saturday, May 1 at Churchill Downs.

2-Division Basketball In DCSL Next Season?

KINGSTON — The Dutchess County Scholastic League's large school Mid-Hudson Conference will split into two divisions for basketball next season if a recommendation by league coaches is approved by DCSL athletic directors.

The proposed alignment would have Kingston, Roosevelt, John Jay, Ketcham, and Arlington in one division and Beacon, Lourdes, Saugerties, Poughkeepsie, and Spackenkill in the other. The divisions were based on school size.

The plan calls for a 14-game league schedule. Teams would play two games each against divisional foes and one each against rivals from the other division. The 14th game would be a playoff matching the club from the other division with the same place in the standings. That would mean the two divisional champions would meet at Dutchess Community College for the league title, the two second place teams would face each other, and so on down the line.

To fill out the standard 18-game schedule, teams would be able to get in four non-league games.

Coaches voted 7-1 in favor of the proposal, thus sending it to the athletic directors. Kingston and Saugerties were not represented at the coaches meeting. KHS coach Mike Rienzo had been at an earlier session during which the plan was developed. Saugerties has been without a coach since Larry Marcus resigned after the recently completed season.

"I sort of prefer the schedule as it is now," said Rienzo, referring to the "18-game lock" in which league schools play each other twice without playing non-league games.

It is believed the one negative vote was cast by Lourdes' coach Dick Beams, who feels alignment should be based on strength, not size. But most coaches felt strength would vary from year to year

Off of this past season's standings, the large school group has the stronger teams with Kingston, Roosevelt, John Jay and Ketcham all at or near the top of the standings.

Athletic directors in most sports generally go along with the recommendation of the respective coaches so it is expected the proposal will be put into operation next year, at least on a trial basis. But Rienzo pointed out that coaches' voting standpoint might not correspond with the AD's administrative outlook.

"We haven't discussed it officially yet," says KHS AD Bill Hurley "From what I've been able to see it seems to have its good aspects. Off the top of my head, however, I'm concerned about scheduling those four non-league games. We should be able to get two with Newburgh, but the other two may be a problem."

Saugerties athletic director Fred Seither, who was not able to attend the coaches meeting due to personal reasons, said he would have to see the proposal in its entirity before commenting.

On the subject of a replacement for Marcus, Seither said no decision would be made within the next four to six weeks.

Saratoga Grand Circuit Draws Record Entry

Moreau stated that 851 two and three year old trotters and pacers are eligible to the Roarin' Grand events. This number far surpasses the all-time record of 777 eligible set in 1947

The best week of standardbred racing at the upstate oval, Grand Circuit Week will be held July 12 through 17

At the end of every racing season, the United State Trotting Association ranks the top racing performers according to gait and age. Of the four top two year olds of 1975, three are eligible to Saratoga's Grand Circuit.

Nevele Thunder, a protege of Hall of Famer trainer-driver Stanley Dancer, leads 51 eligibles in the three year old colt trotting division An overwhelming choice as king of the juveniles last year, Nevele Thunder won 18 to 21 starts and earned $150,487 His race mark of 2:00 3 was also the fastest by a colt trotter in '75.

Bred by Charles and Jeff Slutsky of Ellenville, N.Y., Nevele Thunder was syndicated for $1.5 million last October Dancer, still in his winter headquarters at Pompano Park, Fla., says Thunder "could be the one to break the records of his sire. He's the one to beat this year"

In the two filly divisions, Ima Lula heads the field of 50 trotting eligibles, while Meadow Wilma figures on top in the pacing ranks with 63 potential starters remaining.

Ima Lulu, under the tutelage of Joe O'Brien, won her only start at Saratoga last season while Meadow Wilma met defeat at the Spa oval from Top Lady Almahurst However, she reversed that decision two weeks later at Vernon Downs Trained and driven by Billy Haughton, Meadow Wilma won 19 of 24 starts and picked up $135,000 in earnings.

In the three year old pacing colt ranks, both of the two year old Saratoga winners last season are eligible to return, Meck Hanover for Del MacTavish and Vocal Minority for Billy Haughton.

The two year old eligibles haven't started yet and are thus an unknown quantity. But one freshman already stands out just from an owner's point of view. Armbro Shy, a two year old pacing filly by Most Happy Fella, is jointly owned by Trotting Hall of Famer Delvin Miller and golfing's immortal Arnold Palmer

The popular Saratoga racing strip opens a 183 night stand next week on Thursday, April 15. Post time remains at 8:15 p.m.

Vince Provenzano, Jr.: No. 8 With 709 Series

KINGSTON — Vince Provenzano, Jr put together games of 259, 203 and 247 for a 709 series in the Friday Night Commercial League that vaulted him into the No. 8 spot in the Kingston Area Top Ten for men in the 1975-76 season.

Robert (Tall) Smith, who is in hot pursuit of John Ferraro's all-time city high average of 209 for a season, boosted his average to 213 for 96 games with a 665 blast in the International League

Smith, who has rarely missed the 600 circle this season and has two 700 sets to his credit (730 for No. 1 and 716 for No 5), racked up games of 243, 224 and 198.

2-Division Basketball In DCSL Next Season?

KINGSTON — The Dutchess County Scholastic League's large school Mid-Hudson Conference will split into two divisions for basketball next season if a recommendation by league coaches is approved by DCSL athletic directors.

The proposed alignment would have Kingston, Roosevelt, John Jay, Ketcham, and Arlington in one division and Beacon, Lourdes, Saugerties, Poughkeepsie, and Spackenkill in the other. The divisions were based on school size.

The plan calls for a 14-game league schedule. Teams would play two games each against divisional foes and one each against rivals from the other division. The 14th game would be a playoff matching the club from the other division with the same place in the standings. That would mean the two divisional champions would meet at Dutchess Community College for the league title, the two second place teams would face each other, and so on down the line.

To fill out the standard 18-game schedule, teams would be able to get in four non-league games.

Coaches voted 7-1 in favor of the proposal, thus sending it to the athletic directors. Kingston and Saugerties were not represented at the coaches meeting. KHS coach Mike Rienzo had been at an earlier session during which the plan was developed. Saugerties has been without a coach since Larry Marcus resigned after the recently-completed season.

"I sort of prefer the schedule as it is now," said Rienzo, referring to the "18-game lock" in which league schools play each other twice without playing non-league games.

It is believed the one negative vote was cast by Lourdes' coach Dick Beams, who feels alignment should be based on strength, not size. But most coaches felt strength would vary from year to year.

Off of this past season's standings, the large school group has the stronger teams with Kingston, Roosevelt, John Jay and Ketcham all at or near the top of the standings.

Athletic directors in most sports generally go along with the recommendation of the respective coaches so it is expected the proposal will be put into operation next year, at least on a trial basis. But Rienzo pointed out that coaches' voting standpoint might not correspond with the AD's administrative outlook.

"We haven't discussed it officially yet," says KHS AD Bill Hurley. "From what I've been able to see it seems to have its good aspects. Off the top of my head, however, I'm concerned about scheduling those four non-league games. We should be able to get two with Newburgh, but the other two may be a problem."

Saugerties athletic director Fred Seither, who was not able to attend the coaches meeting due to personal reasons, said he would have to see the proposal in its entirity before commenting.

On the subject of a replacement for Marcus, Seither said no decision would be made within the next four to six weeks.

Saratoga Grand Circuit Draws Record Entry

Moreau stated that 851 two and three year old trotters and pacers are eligible to the Roarin' Grand events. This number far surpasses the all-time record of 777 eligible set in 1947.

The best week of standardbred racing at the upstate oval, Grand Circuit Week will be held July 12 through 17.

At the end of every racing season, the United State Trotting Association ranks the top racing performers according to gait and age. Of the four top two year olds of 1975, three are eligible to Saratoga's Grand Circuit.

Nevele Thunder, a protege of Hall of Famer trainer-driver Stanley Dancer, leads 51 eligibles in the three year old colt trotting division. An overwhelming choice as king of the juveniles last year, Nevele Thunder won 18 to 21 starts and earned $150,487. His race mark of 2:00.3 was also the fastest by a colt trotter in '75.

Bred by Charles and Jeff Slutsky of Ellenville, N.Y., Nevele Thunder was syndicated for $1.5 million last October. Dancer, still in his winter headquarters at Pompano Park, Fla., says Thunder "could be the one to break the records of his sire. He's the one to beat this year."

In the two filly divisions, Ima Lula heads the field of 50 trotting eligibles, while Meadow Wilma figures on top in the pacing ranks with 63 potential starters remaining.

Ima Lulu, under the tutelage of Joe O'Brien, won her only start at Saratoga last season while Meadow Wilma met defeat at the Spa oval from Top Lady Almahurst. However, she reversed that decision two weeks later at Vernon Downs. Trained and driven by Billy Haughton, Meadow Wilma won 19 of 24 starts and picked up $135,000 in earnings.

In the three year old pacing colt ranks, both of the two year old Saratoga winners last season are eligible to return, Meck Hanover for Del MacTavish and Vocal Minority for Billy Haughton.

The two year old eligibles haven't started yet and are thus an unknown quantity. But one freshman already stands out just from an owner's point of view. Armbro Shy, a two year old pacing filly by Most Happy Fella, is jointly owned by Trotting Hall of Famer Delvin Miller and golfing's immortal Arnold Palmer.

The popular Saratoga racing strip opens a 183 night stand next week on Thursday, April 15. Post time remains at 8:15 p.m.

Vince Provenzano, Jr.: No. 8 With 709 Series

KINGSTON — Vince Provenzano, Jr. put together games of 259, 203 and 247 for a 709 series in the Friday Night Commercial League that vaulted him into the No. 8 spot in the Kingston Area Top Ten for men in the 1975-76 season.

Robert (Tall) Smith, who is in hot pursuit of John Ferraro's all-time city high average of 209 for a season, boosted his average to 213 for 96 games with a 665 blast in the International League.

Smith, who has rarely missed the 600 circle this season and has two 700 sets to his credit (730 for No. 1 and 716 for No. 5), racked up games of 243, 224 and 198.

'Billy the Kid' Is Alive and Well At (Of All Places) Monticello Track

MONTICELLO — Billy the Kid was born in Brooklyn but Larry Capasso hails from East Orange, N.J.

Larry Capasso

"I would have beat them all to the draw," says Larry, 40, a medium-sized, dark-haired man with the plump, rosy cheeks of a cherub. "They wouldn't have stood a chance against me."

Larry's confidence is not just some of that Western hot air manufactured by the pulp writers during the bad old days. He is the fastest gun in the world and will be listed in next year's Guinness Book of Records.

Last January, in front of witnesses in Teaneck, N.J., he strapped his .45 Colt Peacemaker — the gun that made the Old West famous — around his waist, rolled up the sleeve of his left hand, spread his legs about four feet apart and slapped leather. Then, officially timed in 19/100ths of a second, he hit a silhouetted target of a man 28 feet away.

Prior to that day the world record for drawing the Colt .45 and hitting a target at that distance with live ammunition being used was 21/100ths of a second, held by Robert Munden, of Kansas City, Mo.

To demonstrate how fast he is, Larry offered an observer a ball point pen. "When you think I'm going to draw," he said, "click the point out." In each test, the Colt was out, the hammer cocked and pointing at the observer in the same time it took for the pen's point to be clicked into place.

His romance with the Old West, however, hasn't been without a price. One day 16 years ago he was practicing his draw and the sheer pin broke, causing a .22 caliber pistol to fire prematurely. Larry shot himself in the left leg and it had to be amputated just above the ankle. These days he walks around without a trace of a limp on a wooden one. Drivers at Monticello kid Larry by saying that his draw is so fact that he shot his leg off.

Larry has been practicing his art for 20 years. "Ever since I was a kid," he says, "I've been dreaming about what it would have been like to be in Dodge City in the '70s and '80s. I'd imagine I was in the O.K. Corral the day Wyatt Earp and Doc Holiday took on the Clantons. Or I would meet Bat Masterson in the center of town and we'd have a showdown."

Larry, a student of the Old West, says Billy the Kid got most of the notches in his gun handle by shooting his victims in the back. Wyatt Earp, he says, wasn't very fast but he was accurate. Doc Holiday, on the other hand, was both fast and accurate.

"One of the fastest of them all," he says, was Ben Thompson, a marshal in Dodge City. "You don't hear much about Thompson," he says, "but he was as fast as anyone in those days. Gun handlers would run for their lives when he went after them."

Aside from running a small stable, Larry practices his draw about three hours a day in the Monticello stable area. When he's not driving in a race, however, the rules of racing being what they are, the .45 has to be left behind.

He is married, has two children and lives with his family in Goddeffroy about 20 miles from the track. As a young man he rode in rodeos and his specialty was riding bucking broncos.

As a boy, he says, he identified with Billy the Kid because he came from the East, was lefthanded and short of stature. He considers himself a man born out of his time. So far as he's concerned his birth was about one hundred years too late.

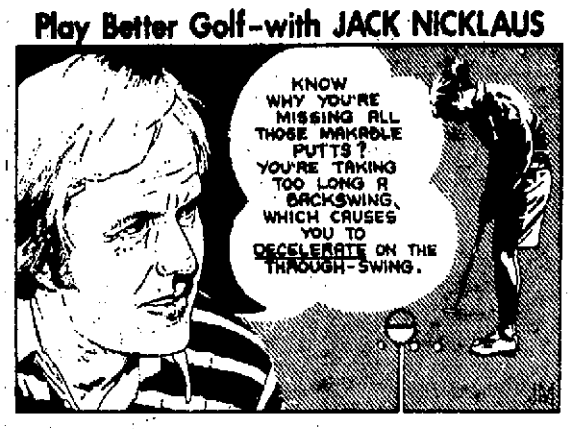

"I used to imagine myself drawing against Billy the Kid or one of the other desperadoes when I was little," he said. Then, pausing a moment for effect, he added: "I still do."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Julius Erving of the New York Nets captured his third American Basketball Association scoring title in the last four years, according to final unofficial statistics released Thursday.

The 6-foot-6 forward finished with a 29.3 point per game average, scoring 2,462 points while playing in all 84 regular season games. He is the only player in ABA history to win the scoring title more than once.

Old Fenway Gets New Scoreboard

BOSTON (UPI) — Fenway Park now has the capability of saying, "Ready when you are, Red Sox."

And when the American League champions arrive at the 64-year-old ball yard, they will see the faces, batting averages and messages staring back at them from center field.

The project was completed early this month and the board, which can show replays and video tapes as well as compute statistics, will be in operation for Monday's home opener between the Red Sox and Cleveland Indians.

The space-age screen, solid black when not in use, has been designed to be as unobtrusive as possible within the chummy, green-painted confines of the venerable park. Red Sox management also has stipulated that the visual images on the board be kept conservative.

"There won't be any cartoons of a pitcher being dragged to the shower or of a pitcher 'getting the hook,' like they have on other boards," said screen operator Jim Healy.

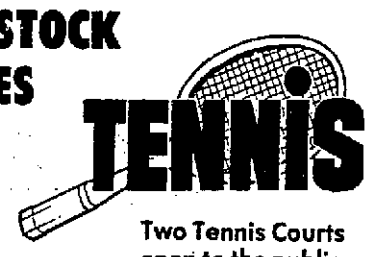

"There will be no time to show replays between batters and once the hitter gets into the batter's box, the image will be still. We don't want anything on the board that will distract the players.

The purpose of the board, which will add to rather than eliminate the scores on the existing manually operated board in left field, is to provide fans with instant information on the players. It also will carry tidbits on breaking sports stories culled from a wire service machine in the control room.

"We're also financing it by selling advertising space on the board so we don't have to raise ticket prices," explained Healy as he punched in a commercial message for visiting soft drink executives.

Healy, 22, is a former grounds crew attendant who for two seasons helped operate the old board from inside the left field wall. "That's a great place to watch a ball game, looking out through the slits in the old scoreboard like you're a member of the old "Knothole Gang," said the 1975 Boston College graduate.

Hutchins has been identified with the Woodstock Open since it started and has built it into one of the most presitigious events in the northeast.

Harvey Bostic starts his third year as Wiltwyck Golf Club professional and Rich Aaron will be the head pro at Rondout, with Rich Quick as his assistant. Aaron's brother Ken, resigned his Rondout post last year to accept the job as head professional at a new golf complex at Sarasota, Fla.

The former Sawyerkill Country Club at Saugerties is temporarily without a pro. Bud Cordore, the pro for the past several years, is now working full time with The Breakers Hotel complex in Palm Beach, Fla. The appointment of a successor to Cordore is expected with the next 10 days

Hughes, the long time greenskeeper at Twaalfskill, relinquishes his amateur status with an impressive list of credentials. He was the first player to win four Ulster County Amateur (Herdegen Memorial) titles and captured the inaugural tournament in 1951, setting a tournament record with a 63 at Woodstock in the final round. The record was tied by Rick Barthel in 1963, also at Woodstock.

Hughes also won 17 Twaalfskill club titles, two inter-club titles and a host of lesser tournaments. Known as The Sweet Swinger, he was the fastest player among the Ulster County stars in the mould of Gene Sarazen's dictum, "miss 'em quick."

Harvey Bostic, who is solidly established at Wiltwyck after a distinguished amateur career, is looking forward to a series of major events. He attended the PGA School in Orlando, Fla. this winter and will attend the Northeastern New York PGA's annual seminar April 26 at the Holiday Inn at Albany.

Bostic has entered the United States Open District Qualifying Round at Colonie Country Club in Albany in May. In 1975, Bostic was among the leaders at Albany Country Club and qualified for the Open Regional Qualifier at the Stanwich Country Club in Greenwich, Conn.

Scotty Dean, a former Onteora High School star now playing with the Ulster County Community College varsity, will be the assistant to Hutchins at Woodstock. Dean attended his first PGA School in February in New York.

New Coach, New Faces on Kingston Nine

By Ira Fusfeld

KINGSTON — There's a new man at the end of the bench and there are plenty of new faces sitting along side him as Kingston High School's varsity baseball team prepares for Thursday's Dutchess County Scholastic League opener at Poughkeepsie.

But the new man and the new faces are hardly strangers to each other, for Bill Neely, KHS' rookie varsity coach, has seen almost all his new faces in his former position as junior varsity mentor.

In fact, only two Tigers, Rich Bell and Val Galm, somehow missed playing for Neely on the JV and that was because they earned instant varsity status.

Neely, who in six years of junior varsity coaching racked up an impressive 64-28 record, finds himself at the helm of a defending championship team. But the squad Neely fields Thursday will be a far cry from the one Ron Cole guided to the 1975 DCSL title.

"I think we've got a good defensive club and we should have fair hitting," says Neely. "We may be a little light pitching."

Where KHS is definitely "light" is in experience. Only one starting pitcher returns along with two infield vets and one outfielder with considerable game time.

Hard throwing Marco Tiano is the pitching mainstay. Behind him are four of Neely's most recent JV grads, Kevin Jordan, Jim Murphy, Bob Schlanger, and Bruce Schnackenberg. Jordan figures to step right in as No. 2 man on the staff while Murphy appears to have the inside shot at No. 3. Dave Loeffler, who was backup to all-league catcher Duane Carey in 1975, has the starting job this time. John Grogan, who will also see outfield duty, is the reserve backstopper.

Jerry Hart and Marc Chapan are the first base candidates and Cliff Lyons is moving in from the outfield to man third base.

Ron Kahlstorf will be the utility infielder.

Bell, who was all-DCSL last year when he hit .373, is solid in left field. Either Tom Slattery or Schackenberg will patrol center field while Grogan, Schlanger and Warren Cagnone are vying for the right field job.

Neely says his young varsity players "did well on the JV level" and expects them to develop into good top-line performers. How well they'll do against DCSL varsity competition he isn't sure.

"I really don't know the league because we always had a JV game while the varsity was playing," Neely explained. "I hear Poughkeepsie is strong and Arlington is always tough."

Neely will find out for sure beginning Thursday.

Gregory Next World Champion?

KINGSTON — There is no doubt in Joe Scorcia's mind that the next middleweight boxing champion of the world will be one the principals in the eight-round main event on the Thursday, April 29, boxing show.

It won't be Johnny Harris, he says. So, it has to be Eddie (KO Flame) Gregory, the other guy.

At present, the hard punching Gregory is the seventh-ranked middleweight contender in the world. In his last outing on March 8 at Madison Square Garden, Gregory knocked out veteran Hildo Silva of San Siego in the seventh round. It was a brutal knockout.

Silva, who had fought most of the ranking middleweights in the world, had a record of 33 wins, six losses and five draws going into the bout. Gregory's victory put him at 14 wins, 2 losses and a draw, with eight knockouts to his credit.

"Rodrigo Valdes can't duck him (Gregory) much longer," said Scorcia. "We hope to arrange for a championship before the end of the year. In the meantime, we'll keep Eddie busy."

Gregory is the classic, explosive puncher who can stop an opponent with one barrage. He floored Silva twice before stopping.

"Gregory has been a knockout puncher from the beginning," Scorcia explained. "When he had only five bouts under his belt, he knocked Messin Cohen of France three times. He likes to counter punch like Muhammad Ali."

Ron (Beau) Whyms, who staged a tremendous rally to draw with Randy Milton of Connecticut on the last card, is paired in the eight round semifinal against Luis Vegas, a real crowd pleaser.

The remainder of the card will be announced by Promoter Joe Garfield.

In the meantime, when was the last time a seventh-ranked boxer fought in Kingston?

Ski Business Slumped Around New York State

ALBANY — Ski business in New York State during the 1975-76 season ranged from outstanding to disappointing, the State Commerce Department said today. Three factors — weather, snow, making and advertising — played a dominant role. The observation was based on a survey of ski areas by the Commerce Department.

Hunter Mountain at Hunter, Song Mountain at Tully and Holiday Mountain at Monticello rated this their best season to date Contributing factors included ideal weather conditions, snowmaking capability and aggressive advertising and promotion campaigns. Attendance at these centers was up, especially at Hunter where "its first 128 days of skiing outproduced the total attendance of last year's 154-day season.

"Good, but not great" described the season for Greek Peak at Cortland. While the center recorded a slight snowfall increase over last season's 85 inches, the number of skiing days declined from 124 in 1974-75 to 93 this season The center did attract more skiers from its local area, but a February thaw cut down on attendance.

A strong marketing effort aimed at the novice skier was credited with increasing the number of skiers at Kissing Bridge near Glenwood. Weather also helped, and the center recorded its greatest weekend attendance over the Jan. 10-11 period.

Big Tupper at Tupper Lake and McCauley Mountain at Old Forge rated their seasons as good. Advertising and promotion increased Big Tupper's attendance by 40 percent over the last year. Although McCauley Mountain had three weekends of rain during February, the center did record 251 inches of snow this season.

With revenue ten percent below last year, Snow Ridge at Turin labeled the 1975-76 season as average. While the number of skiing days is below last year's level, snowfall was the best recorded in the last five years and was 55 inches better than last year's 230 inches.

The just-completed season was rated as fair at Belleayre, Gore and Whiteface Mountains, three State of New York operations. Snowfall was below last year's totals, with measurements of 115 inches at Belleayre, 94 inches at Whiteface and 78 inches at Gore. Skiing days increased from 105 last season to 117 this year at Belleayre, but declined from 104 last year to 87 this year at Gore and from 109 to 96 days at Whiteface.

Factors affecting the state-run operations included mild February weather, an increase in center fees, and the lack of advertising mandated by budget reductions.

Fair assessments were given by representatives of Catamount at Hillsdale and Cortina Valley at Haines Falls. Catamount changed ownership two years ago, and Cortina recently completed its second season of operation.

Calling this the best of the two seasons, Cortina Valley had 73 skiing days and 35 inches of snowfall. A record 1,100 skiers were attracted to this center Jan. 2.

Catamount recorded 55 inches of snowfall over its 92-day skiing season. The season's attendance was down because of February's warm spell, but overall it was better than last year because of special promotions.

Cockaigne at Cherry Creek and Scotch Valley at Stamford were "disappointed" with their seasons. Both cited the lack of snow, along with rain and warm temperatures of February and March as contributing to this year's attendance decline. Both centers had 36 fewer skiing days than last season.

Harvey Bostic

Hughes Is Newest Pro In Area Golf Circles

KINGSTON — With the retirement of Alex Gerlak at Twaalfskill, J. Carson (Jim) Hutchins of Woodstock Country Club becomes the dean of Ulster County golf professionals starting with the 1976 season.

Hutchins, in his 26th year at Woodstock, has been one of the dominant figures in the Northew-Northeastern New York PGA for many years, having held every office in the organization and headed numerous standing committees.

Hutchins has been identified with the Woodstock Open since it started and has built it into one of the most presitigious events in the northeast.

Harvey Bostic starts his third year as Wiltwyck Golf Club professional and Rich Aaron will be the head pro at Rondout, with Rich Quick as his assistant. Aaron's brother Ken, resigned his Rondout post last year to accept the job as head professional at a new golf complex at Sarasota, Fla.

The former Sawyerkill Country Club at Saugerties is temporarily without a pro. Bud Cordore, the pro for the past several years, is now working full time with The Breakers Hotel complex in Palm Beach, Fla. The appointment of a successor to Cordore is expected with the next 10 days.

Scotty Dean, a former Onteora High School star now playing with the Ulster County Community College varsity, will be the assistant to Hutchins at Woodstock. Dean attended his first PGA School in February in New York.

Ski Business Slumped Around New York State

The center did attract more skiers from its local area, but a February thaw cut down on attendance.

A strong marketing effort aimed at the novice skier was credited with increasing the number of skiers at Kissing Bridge near Glenwood. Weather also helped, and the center recorded its greatest weekend attendance over the Jan. 10-11 period.

Big Tupper at Tupper Lake and McCauley Mountain at Old Forge rated their seasons as good. Advertising and promotion increased Big Tupper's attendance by 40 percent over the last year. Although McCauley Mountain had three weekends of rain during February, the center did record 251 inches of snow this season.

With revenue ten percent below last year, Snow Ridge at Turin labeled the 1975-76 season as average. While the number of skiing days is below last year's level, snowfall was the best recorded in the last five years and was 55 inches better than last year's 230 inches.

The just-completed season was rated as fair at Belleayre, Gore and Whiteface Mountains, three State of New York operations. Snowfall was below last year's totals, with measurements of 115 inches at Belleayre, 94 inches at Whiteface and 78 inches at Gore. Skiing days increased from 105 last season to 117 this year at Belleayre, but declined from 104 last year to 87 this year at Gore and from 109 to 96 days at Whiteface.

Factors affecting the state-run operations included mild February weather, an increase in center fees, and the lack of advertising mandated by budget reductions.

Fair assessments were given by representatives of Catamount at Hillsdale and Cortina Valley at Haines Falls. Catamount changed ownership two years ago, and Cortina recently completed its second season of operation.

Calling this the best of the two seasons, Cortina Valley had 73 skiing days and 35 inches of snowfall. A record 1,100 skiers were attracted to this center Jan. 2.

Catamount recorded 55 inches of snowfall over its 92-day skiing season. The season's attendance was down because of February's warm spell, but overall it was better than last year because of special promotions.

Cockaigne at Cherry Creek and Scotch Valley at Stamford were "disappointed" with their seasons. Both cited the lack of snow, along with rain and warm temperatures of February and March as contributing to this year's attendance decline. Both centers had 36 fewer skiing days than last season.

Two Long Islanders Share Top State Cager Honors

SYRACUSE — Two Long Island stars have been named Co-Players of the Year on the New York State Sports Writers Association's annual large school all-star basketball team.

The two are 6-10 center Jim Graziano of Farmingdale and 6-3 Glenn Vickers of Babylon. Joining them on the first team are Mount Vernon's Lowes Moore, Maria Rgeina's John Murray, Lutheran's Wayne McKoy, and Yonkers' Andre Battle. Roosevelt Bouie, 6-11, of top-ranked Kendall was named small school Player of the Year. Also on the first team were Hal Cohen of Canton, Tom Krystofiak of Dunkirk Mindszenty, Steve McDowell of Lackawanna Baker, and Cliff Warwell of Candor. Several local players were selected for lower all-star lists. On the large school side, Dan Marquardt of Roosevelt earned an 11th team berth; George Hughes of Beacon was named to the 13th team; Mark Overbye of Arlington was on the 15th team; and Dino Larry of Poughkeepsie took a spot on the 20th team. Small school players chosen were Reggie Biddings of Liberty, second team; Barry Davis of Fallsburgh, third team; Rae Bridges of Liberty, fourth team; Ed Vaughn of Rhinebeck, fifth team; Anthony Monroe of Marlboro, 10th team; and Pete Gallagher of Coleman, 15th team. The teams were selected by a NYSSWA panel after compiling all-star teams from newspapers and leagues from thoughtout the state.

Headhunters a Lot of Showoffs

DURIN, Sarawak, Malaysia (UPI) — Among Borneo's more hospitable hosts are the descendants of headhunters, who like to pour homemade rice wine, show off their skull collections and joke about how jet planes and nude women are replacing dragons as the most popular tribal tattoos.

They are the Iban, a friendly, easy-going people who enjoy entertaining unexpected guests in their long houses along the rivers of Sarawak, a Malaysian state on Borneo's northern coast.

An agricultural people, they mainly cultivate hill rice. To vary their diets, they fish and hunt with spears and blowguns.

But despite their primitive lifestyle, many Iban, especially those living near the larger towns of Sibu and Kuching, also have one foot firmly in the 20th century.

Sandah P. Jarraw, chief of the long house settlement of Druin, about two hours up river from Sibu, proudly displays the dark blue tattoos given him at puberty to protect him from the tigers and other wild animals of the Borneo jungle.

An elaborate dragon tattoo decorates his right arm and chest, and a small fishhook is tatooed on his left, lower leg.

"Today many young men have tattoos of helicopters, Boeing jets and nude women instead," he says.

Jarraw is also an opposition member of the Sarawak state assembly, called the Council Negri, trying to gain for his people a larger share in the state government.

With 300,000 people, the Iban comprise slightly more than 30 per cent of Sarawak's one million inhabitants. Another 30 per cent are Chinese and 17.5 per cent Malay. But the Malays dominate government and bureaucracy while the Chinese control most of the business.

The wide, muddy Rajang, Borneo's longest river at 360 miles, is lined with lush, dense greenery, occasionally broken by a sawmill or rubber plantation. Durin is located on one of its tributaries.

The settlement's amazing long house, a ridge roofed structure made of weathered hard wood, is almost 50 units long with indoor and outdoor verandas running along the entire length of the building.

The drinking often leads to dancing, sometimes traditional war dances in which the men paint their bodies and carry wooden shields — and all kinds of gaiety ensues.

Although the last major wave of headhunting in Borneo reportedly occurred during World War II as the indigenous tribes resisted Japanese occupation, the Iban love to joke about the practice.

Rather than answering directly if questioned about it, they tell you funny stories.

"I was in a train once and the people sitting next to me asked me where I came from," says a friend of Jarraw's. "I told them I came from a tribe of headhunters. By the next stop all the seats around me were empty."

The farther up the Rajang River you go, the more removed from modern civilization are the long house settlements.

But the Iban are always gracious and friendly, happy to have you spend the night with them and share some toak any time.

Blue Jeans Status Symbol in Soviet

MOSCOW (UPI) — Blue jeans in the West are a symbol of the restless, carefree young — the great levelers that make all men and women sartorially equal.

But in the Soviet Union a pair of blue "dzhinsy" is often prized as a status symbol by the few — and unavailable to the many. For years, it signaled someone if not Western in outlook at least having access to the forbidden fruits of capitalism.

Jeans and long hair used to be regularly assaulted in the press as being representative of capitalist decadence, but the ideological objections are fading.

The Soviet Union even makes its own jeans nowadays, although in insufficient quantity to satisfy demand.

But jeans are slowly becoming more generally available, thanks to imports from East European countries, and India.

Buyers prefer the imports because Soviet jeans look too much like jeans were originally supposed to looh— like functional work pants. Twotone, bell-bottomed Polish jeans are much more popular. An Indian brand called "vaquero," which has a made-in-America look, is very popular but hard to find.

The real thing from the United States still has definite snob value. A pair of authentic, brass-riveted, leather-labeled denims from America is so sought after that people will pay up to 50 rubles ($65) on the black market for a San Francisco label rather than 12 rubles ($15.60) for a Bulgarian substitute in the Tsum Tsum department store.

Genuine Levis seem to be de rigueur among the sons and daughters of the ruling, military and police elite, whose fathers can travel abroad or have access to Western goods through special stores closed to the public. Jewish dissidents who get parcels from abroad also tend to sport them.

The West's tattered, frayed and patched jeans are seen here less frequently. Since dzhinsy are more expensive and hard to get, they tend to be worn more as an article of fashion than of protest.

Jeans suits are particularly prized, and are as likely to be the smartly pressed garb of a middle executive or scientist as the uniform of the wealthier college generation.

Library Extends No Fines

KINGSTON — The Kingston Area Library is continuing Forgiveness Week for a second week, April 11 through April 17. Return your over due books and no fines will be charged, a spokesman said.

The Kingston Children's Library on the second floor of the Millard Building (across from the YMCA) is still interested in getting back books overdue since the fire last November. The hours for the Children's library are Tuesday through Friday 3-5 and Saturday 10-3. There is a pre-school story hour on Thursday at 1 p.m. and a movie hour at 1 p.m. Saturday. Mrs. Sharon Elswit, the Children's librarian, may be called for details.

Troopers Graduate

ALBANY — Hurley State Police Zone Sgt. Richard W. Rauch and Rhinebeck Trooper Robert W. Geschlecht were among 28 police officers who recently graduated from a comprehensive 10-week course designed to increase the skills of field officers in the handling of traffic problems.

Participating in the Police Traffic Services Training Program at the State Police Academy in Albany were 18 members of the New York State Police and 10 officers from other police agencies. The program is one of a series made possible by federal funds allocated by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

France Kind To U.S.

PARIS (UPI) — This is BeKind-To-America-Year in France.

French legislators cry "foul" over U.S. attempts to kill the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde, diplomats complain about U.S. criticism of left gains in France, and other assorted quarrels simmer between France and the United States.

Nonetheless, across France these days stores, towns, organizations and museums are rolling out specialties for 1976 to honor that band of rebels that France backed 200 years ago.

Shop owners on the ChampsElysees have announced they will dress up their windows with Bicentennial displays in July. One clothing shop called "Western House" with ads saying "Happy Birthday America" is selling "Bicentennial Blue Jeans" strewn with stars or stripes. Suspenders and Tshirts splashed with Old Glory designs have been spotted on the ski slopes this winter.

The new books published in France on the United States could stretch from the Eiffel Tower to the Seine. One TV book review program, Apostrophes, collected half a dozen of the authors for one program. In typical French style, most of the show was devoted to a spirited debate as to whether George Washington wanted to start a semimonarchy and cult of personality with the presidential system.

"The seeds of totalitarianism were planted by that system," went one author's argument. "Look at the McCarthy era. It lasted three years. Look at Watergate. A president could be a dictator."

Already a best-seller is "Le Reve et l'Histoire" (The Dream and History), by Claude Julien, which explores whether America ever realized its dream of equality and liberty.

France also is awash with exhibitions about the United States and the American Revolution. Opening this month in Paris is an exposition of photographs on loan from a unique museum, the National Museum of Franco-American Cooperation, founded in the ruins of an old chateau near Compiegne by a wealthy American, Ann Morgan, after World War I.

The Georges Pompidou center in Paris will exhibit American art from 1890 to the present. An exposition of pre1939 American automobiles will be another Bicentennial event in Paris.

City libraries around Paris are showing photographs of American and French leaders in the American revolution. Other exhibitions on the revolution are scheduled to open this spring and summer in Rennes, Cannes, Brest and other French cities.

In the parade department, July 4 marches will be staged in Nice on the Mediterranean coast and in Grasse, named after the family of the admiral who aided the cause.

The city of Lyon will celebrate U.S. Independence Day on July 2, two days ahead of schedule. In Paris, a plaque will be unveiled at the mansion where John A dams lived from 1784 to 1785. The Atlantic resort city of Biarritz will offer a New Orleans night in September.

Radio and television will feature numerous programs on America, including four hourlong radio talk shows on "the intellectual and political life in the United States," and a television round table debate on the American revolution.

France is issuing special postage stamps and coins to mark the Bicentennial. The Sorbonne section of the University of Paris will hold a ceremony commemorating the Declaration of Independence. Most of these events are quite separate from the gifts the French government is sending in 1976 to the United States, including the Comedi arches will be staged in Nice on the Mediterranean coast and in Grasse, named after the family of the admiral who aided the cause.

One-Room Schoolhouse Idea . . . Anyway It's Worth a Try

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Underprivileged kids caught up in a confusing modern world may be helped by a suburban school district's plan to revive the concept of the old one-room schoolhouse and keep students and teachers together for three years at a time.

Wellston school officials say their Elementary Life Cycle program is unlike anything else in the United States today. General Manager Richard Fulton said in an interview the program is an effort by a new administration to improve disappointing student achievement levels.

Fulton points out that problems with student behavior and performance as well as teacher morale and effectiveness usually begin about the fifth grade. "Everybody's revved up and going until then," he said. "Then something happens."

Wellston officials aren't exactly sure what that something is, but they suspect it involves a lack of discipline and stability in the student's world, at home as well as at school.

Officials hope a teacher remaining with a student for three years will become more involved in the student's life and bring out the best work possible.

"One factor we found in all our good teachers was they care about their students and follow their activities outside their own classroom," said district Business Manager Vaughn Meglan. "We figured it would be a natural step for a teacher to have a student for more than one year."

Wellston is trying to go it alone and mold the program to meet local needs without the use of federal funds.

"We're not pontificating at this point," Fulton said. "We're not sure we have the answer, and we're not reaching to become a national model. We're just trying to define and solve our local problem."

District officials picture Wellston as a community with a rural outlook even though it is in the heart of the urban-suburban complex. Income levels are low, and the percentage of students on welfare is high.

"Wellston was a poor white community that turned poor black in the 1950s," Fulton said. He estimates that 95 per cent of the district's 1,700 students are black.

School Board President Shirley Jackson said enthusiasm for the Life Cycle project has brought a new spirit to the community. Fulton said such a positive feeling has been lacking, especially among parents of older students.

"The parent who is delighted to come to his child's elementary school too often feels that when he is summoned to school for an older child, it can only mean trouble," Fulton added.

Officials concede personality clashes may occur between students and teachers that would make a three-year partnership undesirable, but they said transfers could be arranged in such cases.

They also brush aside another possible objection, that students should be exposed to many different styles of teaching.

"We're not exploring whether teaching styles influence the student," said Deputy General Manager Larman Williams. "We're hoping to have teachers tune in to individual learning styles of students."

Wellston's difficulties did not spring up overnight. No one expects quick solutions. "We're not naive," Fulton said. "We know we're dealing with problems larger than we are."

Yet they hope teachers who stay with a student for longer than a year can have a lasting impact and help bring some consistency and order into an often confused situation.

"As we see no value in giving a child a new mother each year, we see no value in giving him a new teacher each year either," Fulton said. "It's disruptive."

These Gals Really Miffed

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Prostitutes at the nearby hot-spring resort of Peitou, the "Sex Capital of Asia," have gone on strike to protest a hotel owner's claim that service and scenery — and not the girls — bring tourists to the region.

Sources in the "Union of Families of Happiness" said Wednesday all the 641 licensed prostitutes and many underground callgirls are striking not for better pay but to protest an "insolent remark" about them by a Peitou hotel owner.

The girls, mostly Buddhists, are taking advantage of the strike to visit temples in central and south Taipei to pray for a better future or a better life after reincarnation, the sources said.

As a result, tourists agents estimated more than 70 per cent of the 2,400 rooms in the 53 hotels at Peitou are empty. The occupancy rate is usually over 95 per cent throughout the year.

An official of the girls' union quoted the board chairman of a leading hotel at Peitou as saying last week, "Our good service and the beautiful scenery surrounding us, and not the prostitutes, are what attracted thousands of international tourists to Peitou every day."

The remark so infuriated the prostitutes they voted unanimously to strike. The union also decided any girl who answered a call by the hotels would be fined the equivalent of $250 during the strike period.

Fish Not Frozen

ULSTER—It was emphasized by Captain Hanks Seafood and Fish Market on Albany Avenue, Kingston, that the Haddock Fillet and Mackerel advertised this week is fresh from the ocean, and not the frozen variety. Their fresh asparagus advertised at 59 cents per pound is now priced at 49 cents per pound.

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Underprivileged kids caught up in a confusing modern world may be helped by a suburban school district's plan to revive the concept of the old one-room schoolhouse and keep students and teachers together for three years at a time.

Wellston school officials say their Elementary Life Cycle program is unlike anything else in the United States today. General Manager Richard Fulton said in an interview the program is an effort by a new administration to improve disappointing student achievement levels.

Fulton points out that problems with student behavior and performance as well as teacher morale and effectiveness usually begin about the fifth grade. "Everybody's revved up and going until then," he said. "Then something happens."

Wellston officials aren't exactly sure what that something is, but they suspect it involves a lack of discipline and stability in the student's world, at home as well as at school.

Officials hope a teacher remaining with a student for three years will become more involved in the student's life and bring out the best work possible.

"One factor we found in all our good teachers was they care about their students and follow their activities outside their own classroom," said district Business Manager Vaughn Meglan. "We figured it would be a natural step for a teacher to have a student for more than one year."

Wellston is trying to go it alone and mold the program to meet local needs without the use of federal funds.

"We're not pontificating at this point," Fulton said. "We're not sure we have the answer, and we're not reaching to become a national model. We're just trying to define and solve our local problem."

District officials picture Wellston as a community with a rural outlook even though it is in the heart of the urban-suburban complex. Income levels are low, and the percentage of students on welfare is high.

"Wellston was a poor white community that turned poor black in the 1950s," Fulton said. He estimates that 95 per cent of the district's 1,700 students are black.

School Board President Shirley Jackson said enthusiasm for the Life Cycle project has brought a new spirit to the community. Fulton said such a positive feeling has been lacking, especially among parents of older students.

"The parent who is delighted to come to his child's elementary school too often feels that when he is summoned to school for an older child, it can only mean trouble," Fulton added.

Officials concede personality clashes may occur between students and teachers that would make a three-year partnership undesirable, but they said transfers could be arranged in such cases.

They also brush aside another possible objection, that students should be exposed to many different styles of teaching.

"We're not exploring whether teaching styles influence the student," said Deputy General Manager Larman Williams. "We're hoping to have teachers tune in to individual learning styles of students."

Wellston's difficulties did not spring up overnight. No one expects quick solutions. "We're not naive," Fulton said. "We know we're dealing with problems larger than we are."

Yet they hope teachers who stay with a student for longer than a year can have a lasting impact and help bring some consistency and order into an often confused situation.

"As we see no value in giving a child a new mother each year, we see no value in giving him a new teacher each year either," Fulton said. "It's disruptive."

These Gals Really Miffed

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Prostitutes at the nearby hot-spring resort of Peitou, the "Sex Capital of Asia," have gone on strike to protest a hotel owner's claim that service and scenery — and not the girls — bring tourists to the region.

Sources in the "Union of Families of Happiness" said Wednesday all the 641 licensed prostitutes and many underground callgirls are striking not for better pay but to protest an "insolent remark" about them by a Peitou hotel owner.

The girls, mostly Buddhists, are taking advantage of the strike to visit temples in central and south Taipei to pray for a better future or a better life after reincarnation, the sources said.

As a result, tourists agents estimated more than 70 per cent of the 2,400 rooms in the 63 hotels at Peitou are empty. The occupancy rate is usually over 95 per cent throughout the year.

An official of the girls' union quoted the board chairman of a leading hotel at Peitou as saying last week, "Our good service and the beautiful scenery surrounding us, and not the prostitutes, are what attracted thousands of international tourists to Peitou every day."

The remark so infuriated the prostitutes they voted unanimously to strike. The union also decided any girl who answered a call by the hotels would be fined the equivalent of $250 during the strike period.

Fish Not Frozen

ULSTER—It was emphasized by Captain Hanks Seafood and Fish Market on Albany Avenue, Kingston, that the Haddock Fillet and Mackerel advertised this week is fresh from the ocean, and not the frozen variety. Their fresh asparagus advertised at 59 cents per pound is now priced at 49 cents per pound.

Red Tape Is Hampering Central Hudson

POUGHKEEPSIE — Central Hudson officials told shareholders Tuesday that the company is forced to spend an inordinate amount of time and money dealing with government agencies concerning regulatory matters

Central Hudson President H Clifton Wilson said at last week's meeting that the utility spent approximately 17,000 man-hours on regulatory activities in 1975, at a cost of more than $500,000 He said the totals would have been even higher if the utility had filed a "major rate or plant siting application during the year.

Theodore H Carlson, chairman of the board and Central Hudson's principal officer, said the amount of time and work required to deal with governmental agencies has become extremely burdensome in recent years, especially when several agencies have overlapping rules and functions.

"We should be permitted to devote more of our time and effort to the primary purpose of our business as our main objective and not so much in continual reviews by governmental agencies, which are becoming more complex and difficult to handle," said Carlson. "It is time to return to reality and simple proceedings."

Wilson's report to the 125 shareholders included a progress report on efforts to improve the efficiency and reduce costs of the corporation He noted that a hiring freeze has been in effect for more than two years, that construction activities have been reduced that there is a moratorium on scheduled overtime and that work performed by outside contractors is being held to an absolute minimum.

Wilson also stated that a consultant is evaluating operations within the Customer Services Group and that a number of changes in work methods have been instituted to improve the group's effectiveness Wilson added that Central Hudson is considering utilizing the consultant to evaluate other areas of its operations

The shareholders re-elected 10 members to one-year terms on the board of directors They are Ernest E. Althouse of Poughkeepsie; Raymond T Benedict of Stamford, Conn., Dr. James R Breed of Poughkeepsie, Carlson of Poughkeepsie; Roy C Ketcham of Fishkill; Edward J Mack of Poughkeepsie; Herbert L Schultz of Kingston; H Peter Stern of Mountainville; John Wilkie of Poughkeepsie; and Wilson of Poughkeepsie

At the board's annual organization meeting that followed the shareholders meeting, Carlson was re-elected chairman of the board and principal officer, Althouse was re-elected vice-chairman and Wilson was re-elected president.

Retaining Businesses Stressed

Business News Today

KINGSTON—Raymond D. O'Connell, deputy commissioner of Commerce for economic development, New York State Department of Commerce, stressed the importance of retaining business in New York State and reversing the economy, at the third Partners In Progress breakfast sponsored Thursday by Kingston Trust Co.

O'Connell explained that his staff was out calling on every business in the state with 100 or more employes to see what their problems and suggestions were, and to track down those contemplating leaving New York State and settling in New Jersey, Connecticut, etc.

He stated the main reasons to be taxes and paper work to comply with various regulations and controls. Asked what was being done to encourage business to remain in New York, O'Connell answered that legislation is under review to scale down the taxes paid by those earning over $25,000, to raise the investment tax credit from 2 per cent to 5 per cent over three years and strengthen the Job Incentive Program Agency in the area during fiscal year 1977.

The deputy commissioner said any problems such as transportation, taxes, compliance, etc., can be handled by his department. They have an open door policy and a watts line to assist businessmen to get quick action instead of getting caught in the snowball and backlog of other departments.

Giving his feelings on the economy and unemployment, O'Connell stated that in New York State it would be at least six months for employment to come back, but a more reasonable figure could be anywhere from six months to a year.

The Division of Economic Development conducts a complete industrial development program designed to attract new industry to the state and help existing industries expand, thereby strengthening the economy of the state and its communities. It is also responsible for promoting tourism in New York State.

The division consists of nine upstate regional offices: the Montreal office; the Bureau of Industrial, Service and Corporate Development; the Job Incentive Bureau; and the Travel Bureau. The division has been faced with many drastic budget cuts. Citing examples, O'Connell indicated that tourists provided New York State an income of $4.3 billion last year. This year the department's budget was cut from $950,000 last year to $400,000 this year. The Department of Environmental Conservation was only cut 4 per cent while the Department of Commerce was cut back by 22 per cent.

He indicated that with such tightening up businesses would suffer even more this year and the effectiveness of his department would be severely impaired if a supplemental budget which is under review now, was not approved and money restored. The effect of cut-backs would not be limited; it would reach out to regional offices closing White Plains, Montreal and possibly those serving the Ulster County area, he said.

The Bank's third Partners in Progress breakfast, according to William H. Stevens, president, represents the bank's feeling that the area financial institutions and businesses must strive to work together to reach our overall goals and objectives.

Takes Break

Rose Coffey (L), retired recently after nearly 46 years with the J.C. Penney store in Kingston. She is shown with store manager Glenn Stampfle. Ms. Coffey was employed June 7, 1930, and has served continuously since under seven store managers, making her the oldest Penney employe in point of service to retire this year. She was honored recently with a retirement party at Holiday Inn, and plans to do some traveling. (Freeman photo)

Don't Get Too Much Talent

"A great passing quarterback can look like a lemon with a team that has no receivers," Rembert said. "So a fine executive can be made to look bad and become discouraged if

"Yet," he said, "many companies make this mistake. They hire a chap who is wonderful at directing a top-notch management team, when in fact the company has no such team. Or perhaps he really is being hired for a backup job or a post well below his potential."

Frank Oliver of Oliver & Rozner Associates of New York agreed, saying, "Chances are the new star who discovers he's been hired under false pretenses this way either will decide to go to sleep on the job and draw his unearned pay or will become so discontented he'll soon be looking for another place."

Curiously, the reverse of the "always hire the winner" syndrome also is encountered frequently with just as disastrous results, Rembert said.

"A chap who is the obvious best choice among those being considered for an important job is vetoed because of the perversity or sheer lack of objectivity on the part of some key member of existing management. The guy says the candidate 'just doesn't look right to me' or 'I don't think he's quite our sort.' Many a company has passed up, for reasons just as absurd, a promising executive who might have changed the firm's whole future for the better."

Just as common, said Oliver, is the practice of hiring people without knowing what kind of executive really is wanted. In consequence, a man is in the dark about the post he is expected to fill. He may not know, for example, whether the objectives he is given are merely short-term goals or long-term goals.

Bridgeford Hunt, president of the Hunt Co. in New York, said far too many firms still hire executives too loosely. They either don't know what they want in a man or if they do know what they want, they don't know how to determine which candidate will best fill the bill.

Hunt says the worst consequence of this kind of haphazard hiring is that inevitably it leads to hiring too many executives. This leads to further difficulties.

Retaining Businesses Stressed

Business News Today

KINGSTON—Raymond D. O'Connell, deputy commissioner of Commerce for economic development, New York State Department of Commerce, stressed the importance of retaining business in New York State and reversing the economy, at the third Partners In Progress breakfast sponsored Thursday by Kingston Trust Co.

O'Connell explained that his staff was out calling on every business in the state with 100 or more employes to see what their problems and suggestions were, and to track down those contemplating leaving New York State and settling in New Jersey, Connecticut, etc.

He stated the main reasons to be taxes and paper work to comply with various regulations and controls. Asked what was being done to encourage business to remain in New York, O'Connell answered that legislation is under review to scale down the taxes paid by those earning over $25,000, to raise the investment tax credit from 2 per cent to 5 per cent over three years and strengthen the Job Incentive Program Agency in the area during fiscal year 1977.

The deputy commissioner said any problems such as transportation, taxes, compliance, etc., can be handled by his department. They have an open door policy and a watts line to assist businessmen to get quick action instead of getting caught in the snowball and backlog of other departments.

Giving his feelings on the economy and unemployment, O'Connell stated that in New York State it would be at least six months for employment to come back, but a more reasonable figure could be anywhere from six months to a year.

The Division of Economic Development conducts a complete industrial development program designed to attract new industry to the state and help existing industries expand, thereby strengthening the economy of the state and its communities. It is also responsible for promoting tourism in New York State.

The division consists of nine upstate regional offices: the Montreal office; the Bureau of Industrial, Service and Corporate Development; the Job Incentive Bureau; and the Travel Bureau. The division has been faced with many drastic budget cuts. Citing examples, O'Connell indicated that tourists provided New York State an income of $4.3 billion last year. This year the department's budget was cut from $950,000 last year to $400,000 this year. The Department of Environmental Conservation was only cut 4 per cent while the Department of Commerce was cut back by 22 per cent.

He indicated that with such tightening up businesses would suffer even more this year and the effectiveness of his department would be severely impaired if a supplemental budget which is under review now, was not approved and money restored. The effect of cut-backs would not be limited; it would reach out to regional offices closing White Plains, Montreal and possibly those serving the Ulster County area, he said.

The Bank's third Partners in Progress breakfast, according to William H. Stevens, president, represents the bank's feeling that the area financial institutions and businesses must strive to work together to reach our overall goals and objectives.

Rose Coffey (L), retired recently after nearly 46 years with the J.C. Penney store in Kingston. She is shown with store manager Glenn Stampfle. Ms. Coffey was employed June 7, 1930, and has served continuously since under seven store managers, making her the oldest Penney employe in point of service to retire this year. She was honored recently with a retirement party at Holiday Inn, and plans to do some traveling. (Freeman photo)

Don't Get Too Much Talent

"A great passing quarterback can look like a lemon with a team that has no receivers," Rembert said. "So a fine executive can be made to look bad and become discouraged if

"Yet," he said, "many companies make this mistake. They hire a chap who is wonderful at directing a top-notch management team, when in fact the company has no such team. Or perhaps he really is being hired for a backup job or a post well below his potential."

Frank Oliver of Oliver & Rozner Associates of New York agreed, saying, "Chances are the new star who discovers he's been hired under false pretenses this way either will decide to go to sleep on the job and draw his unearned pay or will become so discontented he'll soon be looking for another place."

Curiously, the reverse of the "always hire the winner" syndrome also is encountered frequently with just as disastrous results, Rembert said.

"A chap who is the obvious best choice among those being considered for an important job is vetoed because of the perversity or sheer lack of objectivity on the part of some key member of existing management. The guy says the candidate 'just doesn't look right to me' or 'I don't think he's quite our sort.' Many a company has passed up, for reasons just as absurd, a promising executive who might have changed the firm's whole future for the better."

Just as common, said Oliver, is the practice of hiring people without knowing what kind of executive really is wanted. In consequence, a man is in the dark about the post he is expected to fill. He may not know, for example, whether the objectives he is given are merely short-term goals or long-term goals.

Bridgeford Hunt, president of the Hunt Co. in New York, said far too many firms still hire executives too loosely. They either don't know what they want in a man or if they do know what they want, they don't know how to determine which candidate will best fill the bill.

Hunt says the worst consequence of this kind of haphazard hiring is that inevitably it leads to hiring too many executives. This leads to further difficulties.

Eat Here What We Grow Here

KINGSTON—"It is disappointing to walk into a local market and see Washington state apples for sale. We should emphasize local products."

The speaker was Edgar King, acting New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets. His audience was receptive group of 40 members and guests of the Ulster County Farm Bureau gathered Thursday night at the Skytop Restaurant for the bureau's annual "Town and County Dinner," designed to bring together county farmers and members of the community at large in an effort to make known the problems faced by agriculture today.

King, who operates a 550-acre dairy farm near Schuylerville in Saratoga County, has held the state job for only six weeks. "I enjoy my work and I'm learning every day," he told the audience.

king said one of the major problems facing agricultural business in the state is the preservation of valuable land for farming, land that is being sold off to residential developers and industry for other purposes. Loss of such land makes it even more difficult to grow produce within reasonable distances of local markets, which must be done if local farmers are to stay in business with a reasonable expectation o f making a decent living. he said.

"Many people say that the agricultural district law does not go far enough and I must say I agree with them," said King of the state law that restricts sale of land for non-agricultural purposes in designated districts, several of which are located in Ulster County.

"If it is desirable to produce close to the market place, then we must keep this land in (agricultural) production."

King called agriculture the state's business, saying it accounts directly for $1.5 billion a year. Add in the secondary business this money generates and the figure is closer to $5 billion, he estimated.

King, a former president of the Saratoga County Farm Bureau, said: "Farm Bureau people are well aware that we need changes in estate laws to keep land in agricultural production. Unless your financial resources are considerable, your heirs might have to sell most of your land to pay estate taxes."

Other points made by King:

- "I am worried by outside interests buying up agricultural land."
- "The only way (the agricultural department) can help with your problems is for you people to communicate with us."
- "Agricultural problems will never be solved by ourselves. We are fast becoming a minority."
- "We probably could buy produce from distant markets but a transportation strike would be a death blow to urban areas in the state."

Asked from the audience if land grant colleges such as Cornell University and their extension services were geared to the large producer and were ignoring the small farmer, King said he saw no evidence of such a situation.

She had to leave his native New York City to learn to make mocassins from a Cherokee Indian in Copenhagen, Denmark.

She had to travel east from Kansas City, Missouri to Manhattan before realizing she could design and make clothes as eye-catching as any she saw in the big town's fashionable boutiques.

And, since teaming up as husband and wife, Bernard and Sara Morning Star have been finding satisfied customers for their well made handcrafted leather work, fabric and clothing, macrame jewelry and hangings. Anyone who has worn a pair of Bernard's handmade sandals or a velvet dress of original design by Sara knows they have been fashioned by artisans.

The range of handcrafted goods available at their Morning Star Craft Workshop behind the Cafe Espresso on Woodstock's Tinker Street is growing all the time It is a range that reflects one of the differences in their work She is a sewing machine artist; he is a hand craftsman. Among their most popular items are: his custom made sandals, handbags, wallets, hats, belts and leather jewelry; her jump-style, wrap-around dresses, skirts and macrame jewelry

Bernard has been doing custom leathercraft for 15 years. "I really like the work I do," he says. "Sometimes I work 14 to 16 hours a day. It's never boring. You're always looking for new challenges."

His first challenge came in Europe in 1960. Traveling through Spain, he took a year out to learn to make handbags and sandals in a shop in Torremolinas. On a return trip to Europe several years later, he perfected his knowledge in Copenhagen, where he worked with craftsmen from all over Europe and the United States.

Sara, who's been interested in clothing since she was "very little," produces attire that's both beautiful and useful. And, since the taste today is for personalization as opposed to mass production, her long velvet dresses, winter jumpers, wrap-around sundresses and colorful Western shirts of flannel and padded corduroy have market appeal.

Before opening their Woodstock shop, Bernard had shops of his own in New York City and Santa Barbara, Calif , and Sara designed clothes in her own shop in Greenwich Village, later went into wholesaling.

Today, their work is inspired by that of native American Indians. Sara's ancestry is lodged in the Huron tribe of Canada through her French-Canadian father. Bernard works, too, "to give the feeling" of Indian craftsmanship to his leather goods. And to remember that in the craftshop in Copenhagen, he learned that it didn't matter if he took a week to make a billfold, as long as he made it with infinite care and finishing.

In the work offered at Morning Star Craft Workshop, one finds the reenactment of old mediums. As two of the new breed of highly creative craftsmen, Bernard and Sara are professionals who prefer to sell their handmade items in their own shop. Although they've accumulated prizes at crafts shows all over the state, they would rather use the energy required to load up their van and carry their wares hither and yon in doing custom orders in handbags, sandals, clothing or anything else at which they excel.

"We're both at the turning point of our 40s" says Bernard, with a life begins at 40 smile. "It's easy to sew here and to finish sandals here. We have our own tools, we buy our own materials; we like staying at home and working in our shop."

Goodbye, Mary Margaret

The warmth, the humor, the friendly informality that had long ago earned her the title of "first lady of radio" are no more. When Mary Margaret McBride died Wednesday at her home overlooking the Ashokan Reservoir, the voice familiar to millions for more than 40 years was stilled. But over those decades, the wizardry she exerted over her listeners remained constant.

It has been said that Mary Margaret—that's what it seemed almost everyone called her—"invented" the talk show. And, indeed, the radio interviews she began in 1934 established her popularity; were widely imitated; opened a new field for radio enterprise. Among a group who auditioned for a woman's program that year on WOR, the New York station of the Mutual network, she was chosen—on trial at $25 a week.

Under the pseudonym of "Martha Deane," Mary Margaret posed as a grandmother with a large family. She gave household hints in a friendly, homey manner. But after a few days she tired of the grandmother pose and interrupted a program to tell her audience of her misrepresentation. "From now on, I'll just tell you about myself," she said.

Within a short time she had a 15-minute program over the Columbia Broadcasting System, using her own name, in addition to one of 45 minutes on WOR as "Martha Deane." In 1940 she left WOR, and in 1941 moved from CBS to the National Broadcasting Company, which she left in 1950 to join the American Broadcasting Company.

Throughout those years, her name became a household word. One of the most admired of all radio personalities, she received more than a quarter of a million letters a year. Many of her listeners showered her with gifts.

On the 10th anniversary of her radio debut, her admirers packed New York's Madison Square Garden to honor her; on the 15th, the huge Yankee Stadium was engaged for the celebration.

Then, on her 20th—in 1954—the "first lady of radio" signed off as a daily program conductor. It was an occasion that drew many celebrities to her penthouse apartment above Central Park. Her broadcasts over two decades had passed the 15,000-mark, and it was estimated she had interviewed some 30,000 persons in that time.

Even then, Mary Margaret wasn't saying farewell to radio, just to doing a daily program. For years, she and her late manager, Stella Karn, had owned a farm in West Shokan on the rim of the reservoir. She had always broadcast from her penthouse living room in New York City, a room lined to the ceiling with books. Now she began broadcasting from her Catskill Mountains home, which is also paneled in books. From there, she conducted interviews that were aired three mornings a week for an hour over WGHQ, Kingston. In these latter years, too, her broadcasts numbered in the thousands—and many thousands more were interviewed, many of them local and area residents.

Born Nov. 16, 1899 on a farm near Paris, Mo., Mary Margaret was a newspaperwoman during the early years of her career. She was also a free-lance magazine writer and wrote 18 books in collaboration or by herself. During the '50s she was also active in television for a time.

On the national and international levels, she had received numerous honors. Among them were awards from the Women's National Press Club and the Newspaper Woman's Club of New York. She had also been decorated by King Haakan of Norway, and had received the Distinguished Honor Award from the Haitian Government.

The State of Missouri yearly celebrated Sept. 22 as Mary Margaret McBride Day. Additionally, she received an honorary degree of literum doctor from Missouri's William Woods College; had a rose named in her honor; was voted the most popular woman of the air by the Woman's National Radio Committee; won an Oscar from the nationally distributed Radio and Screen magazine; was presented with a special medallion of honor from the Government of the Virgin Islands.

During her Ulster County residency, her honors continued to accumulate. She received the 1958 Radio and Television Award of the Kingston Newspaper Guild; was given the tribute of an entire broadcast day dedicated to her on WGHQ in 1970; was named an honorary citizen of Kingston; and was made an honorary member of Zonta Club of Kingston.

A contributor as well as a recipient, her permanent residency in this area led to her serving as a judge for the 1959 Miss New York State Pageant, and acceptance of the general chairmanship of the 1966 Cancer Crusade of the American Cancer Society, New York State Division. Her work for the cancer group brought her a Citation for Distinguished Service in cancer control programs from the Ulster Unit, American Cancer Society.

As a radio personality, she attracted a wide following. As a person, she was warm, friendly, optimistic, witty, a lover of books. Frank and enthusiastic, she reflected always her times over the generations.

With her Hudson Valley neighbors, she enjoyed discussing such things as her girlhood on the Missouri farm, her experiences as a reporter, famous people she had interviewed. One of her favorite was centered on the time Ulster County invited two famous women to judge the Apple Blossom Queen: Mary Margaret McBride and Martha Deane.

So flowery with praise were both letters of invitation, she accepted under each of her names, both of her arriving for the judging at the same time.

Chatting with her radio audience as if she were talking to a personal friend, Mary Margaret saw good in almost everything. But two things this granddaughter of a Baptist preacher never had anything good to say about were tobacco and alcohol. She heartily disliked both.

The only girl in a family of nine children, Mary Margaret never married. She once confessed to having been in love, but she gave up the idea of marriage in favor of her career.

At the end, of course, she was a symbol. Anybody who lived to her age—76—would automatically be a symbol. But in her case, the McBride legend was based on a good deal more than mere seniority.

The warmth, the wit, the enthusiasm and frankness, the personal touch made her name a household word throughout the nation. She placed a high value on friendship and the value was returned by the devotion of many, foremost among them, her longtime manager Stella Karn and her friend, Cynthia Lowry, who had joined her in recent years on her WGHQ radio show.

The charisma that earned her the admiration of millions was still there at the end. And tothe end she insisted on personally answering every letter she received from a listener; writing a personal thank you note to every guest who had been interviewed. The consciousness of her worth will remain with those who knew her always. She will be missed years to come throughout the Hudson Valley.

Goodbye, Mary Margaret

The warmth, the humor, the friendly informality that had long ago earned her the title of "first lady of radio" are no more. When Mary Margaret McBride died Wednesday at her home overlooking the Ashokan Reservoir, the voice familiar to millions for more than 40 years was stilled. But over those decades, the wizardry she exerted over her listeners remained constant.

It has been said that Mary Margaret—that's what it seemed almost everyone called her—"invented" the talk show. And, indeed, the radio interviews she began in 1934 established her popularity; were widely imitated; opened a new field for radio enterprise. Among a group who auditioned for a woman's program that year on WOR, the New York station of the Mutual network, she was chosen—on trial at $25 a week.

Under the pseudonym of "Martha Deane," Mary Margaret posed as a grandmother with a large family. She gave household hints in a friendly, homey manner. But after a few days she tired of the grandmother pose and interrupted a program to tell her audience of her misrepresentation. "From now on, I'll just tell you about myself," she said.

Within a short time she had a 15-minute program over the Columbia Broadcasting System, using her own name, in addition to one of 45 minutes on WOR as "Martha Deane." In 1940 she left WOR, and in 1941 moved from CBS to the National Broadcasting Company, which she left in 1950 to join the American Broadcasting Company.

Throughout those years, her name became a household word. One of the most admired of all radio personalities, she received more than a quarter of a million letters a year. Many of her listeners showered her with gifts.

On the 10th anniversary of her radio debut, her admirers packed New York's Madison Square Garden to honor her; on the 15th, the huge Yankee Stadium was engaged for the celebration.

Then, on her 20th—in 1954—the "first lady of radio" signed off as a daily program conductor. It was an occasion that drew many celebrities to her penthouse apartment above Central Park. Her broadcasts over two decades had passed the 15,000-mark, and it was estimated she had interviewed some 30,000 persons in that time.

Even then, Mary Margaret wasn't saying farewell to radio, just to doing a daily program. For years, she and her late manager, Stella Karn, had owned a farm in West Shokan on the rim of the reservoir. She had always broadcast from her penthouse living room in New York City, a room lined to the ceiling with books. Now she began broadcasting from her Catskill Mountains home, which is also paneled in books. From there, she conducted interviews that were aired three mornings a week for an hour over WGHQ, Kingston. In these latter years, too, her broadcasts numbered in the thousands—and many thousands more were interviewed, many of them local and area residents.

Born Nov. 16, 1899 on a farm near Paris, Mo., Mary Margaret was a newspaperwoman during the early years of her career. She was also a free-lance magazine writer and wrote 18 books in collaboration or by herself. During the '50s she was also active in television for a time.

On the national and international levels, she had received numerous honors. Among them were awards from the Women's National Press Club and the Newspaper Woman's Club of New York. She had also been decorated by King Haakan of Norway, and had received the Distinguished Honor Award from the Haitian Government.

A Bicentennial tale . . . The Ashokan

The year we lost the Hudson Valley

It began earlier, but 1976 was the year we lost. Of course, I wasn't born until many years later, but my grandfather told me what happened —

The experts all agreed: The west bank of the Hudson River midway between New York City and Albany was the spot for another nuclear power plant. And while we were building one, why not four or more?

"That's the best location, all right," said Designs for Development, the regional planning group. Scientists from city and state concurred, and the federal government gave its blessing. Tempted by the promise of lower taxes, local town planning boards assented.

Programmed public relations personnel visited county and village politicians, attended club meetings, and spoke at area schools: Hudson Valley radio stations and newspapers carried press releases written by experts. Everyone knew what was best:

"The west bank of the Hudson is the only site. It's close to New York City, which needs the power in the first place. There's the river for water, since millions of gallons of water daily are needed for the cooling systems. And most important there's a low population density." They were to learn to their sorrow later what that really meant.

Nuclear Power Plants Built

The plants were built — six in all over the next ten years. They were located so as to try to make them inconspicuous — like hiding an elephant in an open field — and between 1982 and 1986, they were completed and quietly functioning. The site was opened for carefully supervised tours by the public. Trucks carrying radioactive materials rumbled through historic villages and small town streets. And the plants' cooling towers spread their white plumes over the countryside.

First to go were the apple blossoms, always sensitive barometers of ill fortune. Some blamed early spring rains, others talked about the unusually high humidity, and scientists pondered whether low-level radioactive effluents from the plants could have caused the problem. The apple crops dwindled each year until, one by one, discouraged growers tried to sell their orchards to subdividers.

Then it was not long before county doctors noted a rising incidence of asthma and respiratory diseases among their patients. The state health department recommended that anyone with chronic lung trouble move away from the Hudson Valley to escape the dangerously high humidity, caused, they explained, by "atmospheric conditions." Of course, they admitted, the nuclear plants' cooling towers emission of millions of gallons of water vapor into the atmosphere daily "might be playing a role."

As promised, taxes in the area of the plants did drop — at least in the first and second years. Then to everyone's surprise, county and local taxes leaped upward in year three. Why? Industry had abandoned the Hudson Valley, bankrupt orchards brought little return at tax sales, each town and city block had one or more vacant houses as frightened people moved away, and property tax receipts dwindled when real estate went begging. Yet there were still roads to maintain, police and firemen to be paid, and school payrolls to be met, so taxes began to rise each year.

As if things weren't bad enough, by 1997 there was no longer any doubt that radiation levels around the nuclear site were sky-high. The New York State Health Department finally confessed what had been known for several years: Leukemia cases in the Poughkeepsie area were twelve times the national average. "To prevent panic, we withheld this information until all facts had been confirmed." The announcement of soaring radiation levels came as no surprise to local farmers whose corn crop had shrunk each year until it had finally been condemned by the Department of Agriculture as containing excess radioactivity.

Fearing for the health of students and faculty, the State University at New Paltz moved to Binghamton: non-faculty college employes joined former farmers and orchard owners in the welfare lines.

Meltdown

Then came the ultimate disaster — the big meltdown at one of the plants, spreading long-lived radioactivity far and wide. This had been feared as a possibility, but scientists and others had reassured the populace that the chances of it ever happening were infintesimal — even while our legislators had passed laws limiting the utilities' legal liability, just in case. Four thousand people died in the incredible accident that wasn't supposed to happen. Those survivors who could travel abandoned their contaminated fields, homes, and belongings, and fled to areas far from atomic power plants. But new cases of skin cancer and leukemia among them were discovered long after they had been exposed to the radiation released by the accident. And the offspring of mothers who were pregnant at that time have borne the scars for decades.

Trees withered in our green and pleasant valley, empty houses crumbled into decay. The desolation spread from Catskill to Suffern, with Highland and New Paltz totally destroyed —

So ended my grandfather's remembrances. Now it's the year 2076, the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of our country. Nuclear power has long been discredited, along with methadone maintenance, fake cancer cures, and the notion that war is the way to solve problems. The fuel of our day is solar energy. With permission of the Hudson Valley Radiation Commission, I've been allowed to spend no more than three hours at the Mohonk Tower: if I stay longer I would be over-exposed to the radiation still rising from the valley after all these years.

The scene before me is reminiscent of the Moonscape I visited on my vacation last summer: Hollow foundations like craters show where abandoned homes once stood, and dust has settled freely over everything, with no vegetation to prevent erosion and drift. I can see a pile of rubble where Huguenot Street once was. There is not a tree in sight. From the Shawangunks to the Hudson, the desert-like panorama is broken only by the skeleton of the now-abandoned nuclear power plants in Lloyd, their cooling tower fingers pointing grossly into the sky.

If We Had Said No

Could the Hudson Valley have been spared this fate? The few records that survived the meltdown disaster tell the story of the 1970's: how the Hudson Valley residents were misled by those who exploited their community. And grandparents have told how the opponents of nuclear power were labeled "emotional" and "alarmists," and how most local citizens said ho-hum and went along with the experts.

The bicentennial year was our last chance, and we blew it! lost the Hudson Valley.

If only our forefathers had stood firm in 1976 and fought like their ancestors two hundred years before! If only they had cried, "No! This is our valley, and our birthright. Our homes and our roots are here. We will challenge your so-called experts. We will vote out politicians who favor nuclear power. And, if necessary, we will lie down in front of your construction trucks. But there will be NO NUCLEAR PLANTS IN OUR HUDSON VALLEY!" If only —

I, a woman

When my husband left me I was devastated! That's what started me on the road to develop my program on the liberation of myself — a woman."

That was the reaction of actress Viveca Lindfors during a dialogue with the audience Tuesday night at the Stone Ridge campus of Ulster County Community College following her program on "I am a Woman" sponsored by the International Women's Year Committee at the College.

Ms. Lindfors reported her husband of 18 years left her for a younger woman when she was 49 years old. "When he abandoned me I realized I was afraid of myself and not anyone else," she observed. "The break-up of my narriage forced me to reexamine myself and my values."

This triggered a change in the actress' attitudes and brought on a private liberation which influenced her life and work.

In presenting her "Woman" program at more than 400 places throughout the country, Ms. Lindfors has faced audiences composed of about 70 percent women and 30 percent men on the average. She reported their reactions to her performances have been "most positive."

One listener asked the actress how she could travel around the country so much and still have a relationship with someone.

"I'm in the fifth year of a relationship with a man," replied Ms. Lindfors. "It's still going on and I've been traveling a lot."

In the last five years, Ms. Lindfors reports she has come to realize more than ever "that I am a woman. I can't separate myself into different parts," she added.

The Swedish-born actress said she feels there is "a new kind of respect we're developing for each other — both men and women."

She reported everything is being reexamined today. "Equality is important," she announced. "If you can't be equal in marriage you can't be equal any other place."

Ms. Lindfors reports women are changing. "It's a good thing for humanity," she explained, "because we have a chance to get close to ourselves."

"I feel relationships between men and women never have had a better chance than today," the actress professed. "That's because the rose-colored glasses don't work as well any more."

One bald-headed man in the audience told Ms. Lindfors that "you're the greatest." He reported she keeps him awake late into the night watching her former films on television."

The Vandenberg Learning Center

The Campus School's philosophy by Fantini

Like the name "Thomas E. Dewey Thruway," the name of Vandenberg Learning Center has not really caught on with the public, but most would recognize the name Campus School of SUNY at New Paltz.

"Learning Center" seems to epitomize the aims of the school's philosophical director, Dr. Mario Fantini, an educator of repute and Dean of the Faculty at the college.

The learning is not intended to be a one-way street at the Center, with wisdom flowing from teacher to student in a neat array, although this doubtless takes place at times. The teachers are also trying their best to find out what turns the students on to learning and, in turn, pass this information on to public school systems.

It is an experimental atmosphere, but the key word is "choice" and Dr. Fantini as a staunch advocate of attempting to tailor the method of instruction to the needs of the child. The only way to do this is to have a choice of methods in public schools and allow the parent and child to find the right combination — without inflating the cost, is the message.

Many of the methods of instruction have been around for years and have wide followings: the structured Montessori style; a "family style" with different ages grouped together like the old one room schoolhouse; a behavior reinforcement structure, wherein the child is quickly rewarded for positive behavior; "traditional" functional methods. In some classrooms teachers prefer to walk among small groups, each doing their project of the moment. Many so-called "open classrooms" have been operating for years in the New York City school system, and some public school teachers have never taught another way.

When the child begins at Vandenberg (no; sounds like an Air Force Base) he/she may decide after a month or so that something else ought to be given a try.

Another type of class setting is tried and, if it fits, the child may stay put for a long time. "They are not sentenced for life," said Dr. Fantini. "To some children it makes little difference. They will learn anywhere. But some prefer one much better." He pointed to the fact that he had two children in school: one liked a loose, unstructured setting and the other a more disciplined style.

"We don't want to ram anything down anyone's throat," he explained.

But with generally only one style of instruction in public schools (minor variations among teachers, of course) the public system, is in effect, ramming it down everyone's throats. This has produced, according to the dean, a very sad phenomenon — labeling of children.

"We label those that don't adjust to public school 'abnormal'," he stated. I told him of a story: when I was in third grade my mother visited the classroom and my friend Teddy told her, "My name's Teddy. I'm the dumbest kid in the class." But Teddy was far from dumb when we played after school on the streets or in the park. Dr. Fantini nodded his head in agreement.

With almost all educators agreeing that the natural zest for learning should most importantly be developed in the early years, the rubber stamp system thwarts too many children's natural abilities and discourages them from trying by the time secondary school is reached.

The Campus School is presently for children up through the eighth grade, but Dr. Fantini said that he and the New Paltz Central School District are working on some educational cross-fertilization in the high school, using "our tremendous resources" to offer more alternatives to the public school. The college has technical assistants to help Dr. Fantini in his job of exporting ideas and setting up educational workshops throughout the state for public school officials and teachers.

A "pledge of cooperation" from the local school district was given this week at a public meeting to explain the recent financial salvation of the Campus School.

So much for the official point of view on the values of the Campus School. There is no dispute that it offers choices — but some differing opinion on how exemplary its modus operendus really is.

One veteran of the SUNY at New Paltz education faculty, who shall remain nameless, told the Freeman, "I have had three kids in the Campus School and have taken three out. One was being virtually destroyed."

He commented, "It's supposed to be innovative. If you know anything about the various options, there are more options than children to go around. I think they're trying too many programs at once."

The staff member said he thought the school could be a "valuable asset in teacher education. But where you put a large number of college aged kids in a building, it can be disruptive. School aged children can be upset."

He also said the school has not been reluctant to keep an accurate account of what they do, "was the accusation. "They've not been candid."

A weakness was seen as "a mixed bag of teachers; some are very strong people, some weak . . . There have been two studies done in the last ten years. Both raised serious reservations."

A weakness was seen as "a mixed bag of teachers; some are very strong people, some weak . . . There have been two studies done in the last ten years. Both raised serious reservations."

How do graduates of the Campus School do in public high schools? we asked. The answer, "OK; but most of them are a select group who could make it anywhere."

A general assessment of the program by this Ph.D of the college's education faculty: "They create the illusion of experimentation, without the discipline it requires."

The Campus School draws its students from several districts nearby, but does not maintain formal ties as such with the public school districts through permanent programs.

Dr. Frank Marlow, superintendent of Onteora Central School, said his district doesn't "have any direct ties to the Campus School," but that some influence is felt through student teachers from New Paltz who work in the Onteora district. Dr. Marlow regards the curriculum at Onteora, especially at the secondary level, as quite flexible with many course offerings to choose from.

BOOKS

Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $15)

By the early 1900s, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., ruled as master of Standard Oil, his creation. His fortune and income seemed infinite compared with working-class pay scales.

He could have just taken his money and run, the authors speculate, and then the Rockefeller descendants would have been no different from other offspring of robber baron industrialists.

But John D., Sr., true to his Baptist precepts, decided on good works. He became the most remarkable philanthropist in America, and probably the world.

"Now, he would put it (his money) to work to make sure his heirs did not face the same hatred he had in his life," the authors write.

John D. the first was not as successful in smoothing a path for his descendants as he was in building a fabulous fortune. His son, particularly, suffered under the shadow of his enormously rich father.

But the first John D. did found a dynasty that, in its fourth generation, remains an intriguing, influential breed who are as close as his country has come to royalty. Warts and all, a Rockefeller is different from a Smith or a Jones.

And the difference is more than money.

This is a meticulous, absorbing account of the moneyed Rockefellers and the diverse effects of wealth on individuals who happen to be Rockefellers. JDR, Jr., finally managed to cope with his position. His sons — among them Nelson the Politician and David the Banker — carved out their own niches in society.

Yet the fourth generation — "the Cousins" — are less comfortable with money and position.

Said one great grandaughter: "It's hard work for a young person to be a Rockefeller... The weight of it is such that we all at different times have a tremendous urge to get away from being a Rockefeller for a while."

Reading about the Rockefellers in this thick volum is next best thing to being one. This is not a deep, historical study, but an admirable, consistently intriguing reportage that has sweep and gusto. Joan Hanauer (UPI)

The Universe, by Lloyd Motz.

Asimov on Physics, by Isaac Asimov.

(Doubleday, $9.95)

These two books cover much the same ground, in very different ways.

Asimov, one of the most prolific science writers imaginable, has published yet yet another collection, this time of 17 essays written between 1958 and 1965.

They cover almost the entire range of physics from Newton to black holes. Attractively written, of course, they boast good sections on the difficult subjects of entropy and the uncertainty principle. Considering how quickly science moves today, the essays are not as outdated as you might imagine.

In The Universe, Motz, professor of astronomy at Columbia University, New York City, has written one of the best introductions to modern physics and astronomy for the layman, and well worth the price. Glenne Currie (UPI)

The Vandenberg Learning Center

The Campus School's philosophy by Fantini

Like the name "Thomas E. Dewey Thruway," the name of Vandenberg Learning Center has not really caught on with the public, but most would recognize the name Campus School of SUNY at New Paltz.

"Learning Center" seems to epitomize the aims of the school's philosophical director, Dr. Mario Fantini, an educator of repute and Dean of the Faculty at the college.

The learning is not intended to be a one-way street at the Center, with wisdom flowing from teacher to student in a neat array, although this doubtless takes place at times. The teachers are also trying their best to find out what turns the students on to learning and, in turn, pass this information on to public school systems.

It is an experimental atmosphere, but the key word is "choice" and Dr. Fantini as a staunch advocate of attempting to tailor the method of instruction to the needs of the child. The only way to do this is to have a choice of methods in public schools and allow the parent and child to find the right combination — without inflating the cost, is the message.

Many of the methods of instruction have been around for years and have wide followings: the structured Montessori style; a "family style" with different ages grouped together like the old one room schoolhouse; a behavior reinforcement structure, wherein the child is quickly rewarded for positive behavior; "traditional" functional methods. In some classrooms teachers prefer to walk among small groups, each doing their project of the moment. Many so-called "open classrooms" have been operating for years in the New York City school system, and some public school teachers have never taught another way.

When the child begins at Vandenberg (no; sounds like an Air Force Base) he/she may decide after a month or so that something else ought to be given a try.

Another type of class setting is tried and, if it fits, the child may stay put for a long time. "They are not sentenced for life," said Dr. Fantini. "To some children it makes little difference. They will learn anywhere. But some prefer one much better." He pointed to the fact that he had two children in school: one liked a loose, unstructured setting and the other a more disciplined style.

"We don't want to ram anything down anyone's throat," he explained.

But with generally only one style of instruction in public schools (minor variations among teachers, of course) the public system, is in effect, ramming it down everyone's throats. This has produced, according to the dean, a very sad phenomenon — labeling of children.

"We label those that don't adjust to public school 'abnormal'," he stated. I told him of a story: when I was in third grade my mother visited the classroom and my friend Teddy told her, "My name's Teddy. I'm the dumbest kid in the class." But Teddy was far from dumb when we played after school on the streets or in the park. Dr. Fantini nodded his head in agreement.

With almost all educators agreeing that the natural zest for learning should most importantly be developed in the early years, the rubber stamp system thwarts too many children's natural abilities and discourages them from trying by the time secondary school is reached.

The Campus School is presently for children up through the eighth grade, but Dr. Fantini said that he and the New Paltz Central School District are working on some educational cross-fertilization in the high school, using "our tremendous resources" to offer more alternatives to the public school. The college has technical assistants to help Dr. Fantini in his job of exporting ideas and setting up educational workshops throughout the state for public school officials and teachers.

A "pledge of cooperation" from the local school district was given this week at a public meeting to explain the recent financial salvation of the Campus School.

"Our work with children must be exemplary; and we must give choices," said Dr. Fantini of the guiding principles of the Learn Center.

So much for the official point of view on the values of the Campus School. There is no dispute that it offers choices — but some differing opinion on how exemplary its modus operendus really is.

The DeNardo Home

The two-story Colonial home of Hilde and Frank DeNardo has eclectic decor. The antique has been mixed with the contemporary, making an elegant showplace of the 10 room, three bath, West Hurley residence.

The family room is in maple Colonial decor. A deerhead on the wall is a trophy of Mrs. DeNardo's son Brian O'Connor, a Conservation and Land Management major at State University College at Cobleskill. Opposite side of family room has double brick see-through fireplace with reverse side in living room. Assortment of colorful beer steins from Germany line the mantle of the fireplace.

Living room is traditional in decor, in red and white. Oriental antiques date as far back as the Black Moor period of China. Drapes are red velvet.

The DeNardo's Mediterranean bedroom features royal blue and white decor. A hand-blown glass owl vase on dresser was brought back from Mexico by Mrs. DeNardo.

The DeNardos are proprietors of Lord and Ladies I and II of Kingston.

Linda Gerrtisen guest stars as a kooky teenager who tells police she saw the beginning of what she insists culminated in a slaying in 'Runaway' on the Monday, April 12 episode of 'Jigsaw John' at 10:00 PM (E.S.T.) on the NBC Network.

When police are unable to find a body, Jigsaw John insists young Julie is an emotionally disturbed girl trying to attract attention, though Sam Donner believes she is telling the truth. Subsequent investigation unearths evidence that Julie has tipped off police to a homicide. Jack Warden plays the lead role of Jigsaw John and Alan Feinstein stars as Sam Donner.

JIGSAW JOHN

Linda Gerrtisen guest stars as a kooky teenager who tells police she saw the beginning of what she insists culminated in a slaying in 'Runaway' on the Monday, April 12 episode of 'Jigsaw John' at 10:00 PM (E.S.T.) on the NBC Network.

When police are unable to find a body, Jigsaw John insists young Julie is an emotionally disturbed girl trying to attract attention, though Sam Donner believes she is telling the truth. Subsequent investigation unearths evidence that Julie has tipped off police to a homicide. Jack Warden plays the lead role of Jigsaw John and Alan Feinstein stars as Sam Donner.
